Darlan Assassin Is Executed; Military Rites for Leader

French May Fall Behind Gen. Giraud

Nazi Radio and Press Try Hard to Make Capital From 'Anglo' Assassination

French Chief in London Has Nothing to Say About Slaying

London, Dec. 26 (AP)—Reuters reported from Algiers that a firing squad put to death this morning the 22-year-old assassin of Admiral Jean Darlan, quickly carrying out the sentence of a court martial for the Christmas Eve slaying.

The assassin previously had been scheduled to face the firing squad at dawn.

(CBS correspondent Charles Collingwood also reported to New York that the sentence of death had been executed.)

Neither the name nor the motive of the assassin as yet had been divulged. He was described however, as of French nationality with an Italian mother still living in Italy.

(Collingwood said Darlan's funeral was held with considerable military ceremony this morning and was attended by the highest allied officers, including Lieutenant Generals Dwight D. Eisenhower and Mark W. Clark, who stood with Mme. Darlan around the casket after the services in the Algiers cathedral as American, British and French troops marched past.

(The body, which had lain in state in the fort of the government palace, was moved into chapel where it now lies, he said.)

Gen. Charles De Gaulle may formally declare himself for unity among all pro-allied French elements if Gen. Henri Giraud is appointed successor to Admiral Jean Darlan as head of French North Africa, persons familiar with the Fighting French leader's policies said last night.

De Gaulle, one of those who disapproved most strongly the arrangement by which the assassinated French Admiral took over African colonial leadership, remained silent on Darlan's slaying and on the possible developments his death may bring in pro-allied French circles.

In Bern, dispatches said, some Frenchmen saw Darlan's death as clearing away a principal obstacle in the path of De Gaulle's followers. They said, however, that much apparently depended on the identity and motives of the assassin, and that it was possible the act might even widen the division among French elements.

In one broadcast the Germans attributed the assassination to the British, and Paul Schmidt, head of the Foreign Press section of the German foreign office, was quoted by the Vichy radio as saying:

"When two Allies such as America and Britain can only settle their political differences by murder we cannot but rejoice."

German broadcasts sought to make capital of the assassination, using it in an effort to create a rift between Americans and British.

Berlin broadcasts said the Paris Press was unanimous in charging the British intelligence service with responsibility for Darlan's death.

The Admiral's dying words, unreported from any other source, were said by the Nazi-Controlled Paris papers to have been: "There is nothing more for me to do. Britain has reached its objective."

Council Is Called

Algiers, Dec. 26 (AP)—The 22-year-old assassin whose bullets cut down Admiral Jean Darlan on Christmas Eve was scheduled for swift execution today as the imperial council named by Darlan was called to choose his successor as high commissioner of the French African colonies.

A court martial, acting speedily after the death of the former Vichy collaborationist who joined the allies, decreed the death sentence for the assassin, whose name was still undisclosed but who was described as of French nationality with an Italian mother.

Police powers in French North Africa were taken over yesterday by Gen. Henri Honore Giraud, French military commander now regarded as one of the possible successors to Darlan's political

Gillette Declares Synthetic Rubber Production Lags

Special Subcommittee Will Question Jeffers on 'Impeding Force'; Shortage Is Bad

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—Senator Gillette (D-Iowa) declared today synthetic rubber production was two to three months behind schedule and blamed "apparent complacency" for what he described as "a desperate situation."

Gillette told reporters that the agriculture subcommittee of which he is chairman would question Rubber Administrator William M. Jeffers and War Production Board officials next month in an attempt to find out "just what the impeding force is" and to try to prevent "chaos."

Gillette said Bradley Dewey, Deputy Rubber Director, previously had told the committee a month's delay in the development of synthetic rubber production would leave rubber supplies "below the danger line by late next summer."

Gillette expressed belief that Jeffers was doing his best and said the committee wanted to give him every chance to "bring order out of chaos and confusion."

"But," he added, "we feel it is time to ask for definite information."

Jeffers said Wednesday in Omaha the rubber shortage might make it necessary to call for the fifth, or spare tire, from many automobiles and that some machines might be taken off the roads entirely.

The committee, Gillette said, would center its attention on what he termed the delay in constructing plants to manufacture alcohol from grain for use in synthetic rubber.

Kidnaping Investigated

Rock Island, Ill., Dec. 26 (AP)—Rock Island police are investigating the reported kidnaping of Kenneth Morrison, 3.

Austin Brown Has Narrow Escape in Auto Accident

Austin Brown of Route 2, Sawkill, had a narrow escape from serious injury when his automobile skidded on the ice on Wilbur avenue at 6:20 o'clock Thursday evening and shot down an embankment, turning completely over and alighting on all four wheels in the brook that runs alongside the road.

Officers Hyatt and Every were sent to the scene and handled traffic while the automobile was taken out of the brook and put back on the road, when it was towed to a garage for repairs.

Brown, according to the police report, escaped with a bump on the head and a skinned leg.

Domestic Larder Is Somewhat Shy

Supplies for Men Overseas and Needy Allies Cut Into U. S. Stores

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—Feeding the fighting men overseas and putting some food on the tables of our needy allies had sliced deeply into the nation's domestic larder this year, a check-up on America's foodstuff shipments for 1942 revealed today.

To the average housewife, confronted with many a shortage on her shopping trips, it meant that she was giving her neighbors across the seas approximately the equivalent of:

One-third of her bacon and other products; one-fifth of her beef and veal; two out of each dozen eggs, and an ounce from each pound of butter and cheese and a small glass-full from each quart of milk.

And the fact that one of the boys—or girls—was "over there," eating with the neighbors couldn't prevent that from meaning smaller portions for the folks at home.

Government buying for lend-lease shipment to our allies and for the armed services took just

Young Men Are Best for Military Service, Medicos and Others Agree

Chicago, Dec. 26 (AP) — Young men are the best fitted to withstand the grueling tasks exacted in military service, just as they are in athletics, a group of medical men, physical directors and military officials agree.

Their opinions, gathered in a symposium, differ, however, as to the reasons.

Discussing the halting of induction of men over 38 years old into the armed forces, Dr. J. R. Miller, dean of the Northwestern University College of Medicine, said today that "men in their thirties do not have the resiliency of youth. This is evident in sports, where few men are active after 28."

Dr. Miller said that noticeable body degeneration begins in the third decade of life, and that "many athletes begin to lose their resiliency in the late twenties. Young men can sleep on the ground and undergo other hardships encountered in the army and come back fit the next day, but those in the third decade can't."

Dr. John S. Coulter, former army physician, asserted that "this is not a war for men over 40. Proof of unfitness is shown when they come to the obstacle courses now in use to harden them. Older men can't even stand doubletime marching."

Ervin Beyer, instructor of physical education who is training 400 air force cadets at the University of Chicago, said that strength in men reaches its zenith between the ages of 20 and 29 and then subsides gradually. He believes general endurance reaches its peak in men between 25 and 35.

"Strength and endurance may be compared," he explained. "Strength localizes one part of the

Wavell Beats Off Two Jap Attacks In Burmese Hills

American Fliers Destroy 24 More Airplanes at Munda Air Base, New Georgia

(By The Associated Press).

Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell's British forces from India were officially credited today with beating off two Japanese attacks in the Chin Hills in Burma, 110 miles northeast of the big Japanese base at Akyab, the target of another British column driving along the Bay of Bengal coast.

British headquarters in India said the battle occured the day before Christmas when the Japanese attempted to dislodge patrols from positions previously captured by the British.

A communique said Japanese frontal and flanking attacks were repelled with losses to the enemy on both occasions.

This was the first flare of activity reported in the northern hills in some time and indicated that the Japanese were testing out British defenses in that area.

R. A. F. bombers and fighters blasted anew at Japanese aircraft at Toungoo airdrome and carried out widespread attacks on other enemy targets in Burma.

Elsewhere in the Far Pacific, American fliers destroyed 24 more Japanese planes at Munda, new enemy air base on New Georgia Island 170 miles north of Guadalcanal, and pounded barges attempting to land reinforcements and supplies.

Fourteen Japanese planes were shot down out of the skies and 10 other destroyed on the ground without damage to a single U. S. plane.

On the New Guinea front, trapped Japanese forces still held out on a mile-long sector along the Papuan beach at Buna, with American and Australian troops slowly moving in against the enemy's strongly fortified defenses.

Stewart Field Man Dies

New York, Dec. 26 (AP)—A soldier identified as Private Elliott B. Goulet, 33, attached to the air base at Stewart Field, West Point, was killed today when he toppled into the path of a subway train at an upper Manhattan station. Dennis Daly, motorman, said he saw the soldier fall to the tracks in front of the train and applied the brakes immediately. Several cars passed over the victim before the train could be stopped, police said. Identification was made by an Army pass and other papers found on the body.

Car Demolishes Boy's Sled

Edward C. Kigalicz of Grand Gorge, reported to the police department Thursday afternoon that while driving south on East Chester street, and just as he was passing another car, a boy and a sled appeared in the road before him and before he could halt his car it had struck the sled, demolishing it. The boy who was pulling his sled across the road, was not hit. He said that the boy was named Vitarus, of 123 East Chester street.

Ruml Plan Finds Opponent in View Given by Doughton

Ways and Means Chairman Favors Pay-as-You-Go Basis Minus Erasure of Year's Taxes

By FRANCIS M. Le MAY

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—Rep. Doughton (D-N.C.), chairman of the powerful House Ways and Means committee, said today he favored putting federal income tax collection on a "pay-as-you-go" basis but expressed opposition to the Ruml plan which would wipe out a year's taxes to achieve that objective.

A "pay-as-you-go" proposal seem certain to come up when the Ways and Means committee begins consideration of a new tax bill shortly after congress convenes next month.

"In view of the unprecedented burden on the federal treasury in wartime," Doughton said of the Ruml plan, "I cannot see how we can erase several billions of dollars the taxpayers owe the government on their individual incomes for any one year.

"The nation's financial integrity must be maintained. I think that in protecting the credit of my government I am protecting myself, my family, and all of the people."

Under the plan advanced by Beardsley Ruml, chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, income taxes on the previous year's earnings would be wiped out and payments would be made on the current year's taxes through weekly or monthly deductions from an individual's earnings. Special provisions would be made for business men and others whose incomes were not in the form of regular salary checks.

The Ruml plan was proposed as part of the $25,000,000,000 tax bill written last year, but was discarded because of Treasury Department objections to forgiving 1942 taxes.

Senator Clary (D-Mo) chairman of a finance subcommittee which recommended the Ruml proposal, said recently enactment of a plan to shift tax payments to a current year basis seemed "inevitable."

Doughton said the greatest obstacle in changing to a current payment basis was finding out how the individual, without undue burden could start paying taxes for the current year and at the same time pay the tax for the previous year, which now becomes due on March 15.

He said many persons who do not set aside a sufficient portion of their previous year's income to pay the tax in March were in the habit of deducting from their current incomes to meet the preceding year's taxes.

In addition, he said, there would be difficulty in determining what each person would pay weekly or monthly under the curo payment plan. Business and professional men and farmers especially, he explained, could not estimate with any certainty the amount of their income for the year ahead. Weekly or monthly payments would be based on those estimated.

Commission Established

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—President Roosevelt today established a typhus commission to protect members of the armed forces from typhus fever both here and abroad. The commission will serve with the army and will consist of a director to be appointed by the secretary of war, and officers of the army medical corps, navy medical corps and public health service.

Cars Are Damaged

It was reported to the police department Friday evening that while the automobile of Theodore Leminster of 59 Gill street was parked in front of the house that it was struck by an auto operated by Augustus Stepski of 187 Fourth avenue. Both cars were damaged but no personal injuries were reported.

Bitten by Dog

Thomas Hyman of 151 Smith avenue reported to the police department Thursday that he had been bitten in the finger by a dog owned by William F. Crosby of 17 Ardsley street. He said he had the wound treated at the Kingston Hospital.

War Stamps Are Lost

Thursday afternoon while delivering papers one of The Freeman carriers lost a number of War Savings Stamps between Belvedere street and Beck's Market on Broadway. The finder is asked to return them or notify The Freeman branch office on Fair street.

Gas and Oil Price Jump Declared

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—Gasoline dealers over the country were granted permission by the Office of Price Administration today to sell at a 3-cent retail margin over cost, a margin which has been allowed Atlantic seaboard filling stations since last May.

The action thus permits dealers whose prices are now frozen at each station's level of October 1-15, 1941, to increase their prices if they provide a margin of less than three cents.

Such an increase is not mandatory, it was emphasized by an O. P. A. spokesman, but will allow dealers whose prices were frozen at an unprofitably low level—because of local price wars or other reasons—to get back to a profit making margin.

A minority of dealers will be affected, O. P. A. said.

The action was described as "part of O. P. A.'s program to aid small business establishments to withstand the impact of war time expedients," and to help retailers to stay in business despite the curtailment in sales volume caused by rationing.

Meanwhile it was expected that O. P. A. would take some action soon to relieve eastern dealers whose sales volume has been sharply cut by the reduction in value of all passenger car ration coupons from four gallons to three.

Such price relief was requested Thursday by Harry Wainwright, an official of organized retail stations in Washington and Baltimore, who said the 25 per cent drop in sales volume was making it impossible for many dealers to keep open. Wainwright said his discussion with O. P. A. officials was on a coast-wide, rather than a purely local basis, indicating that if relief were granted it would apply

178 Persons Die In Yule Mishaps

Traffic Accidents Result in 99 Fatalities; Last Year's Toll 431

(By The Associated Press)

Violent death came to 178 persons throughout the nation during the Christmas holidays, with traffic accidents accounting for 99 fatalities, reports recorded today showed.

High as the total was, it appeared that the nation had enjoyed one of its safest Christmas holidays in years. By dawn of December 26 last year, 431 deaths had been listed. Of that number 334 lives were lost in automobile and other vehicles.

The fact that there were fewer cars on the highways because of tire shortages and gasoline rationing was believed partly responsible for the smaller number of traffic fatalities during this Yuletide period compared with last year.

An Associated Press compilation showed that California had the greatest number of accidental deaths for this year's Christmas holidays, with 27. Illinois was second with 19 and New York and Ohio each had 15.

Rommel No Longer Is Threat to Suez, Gen. Andrews Says

However, Allies Face Hard Fight, He Says, Before Axis Can Be Driven From Africa

(The following dispatch from DeWitt Mackenzie, written in Cairo after his visit to the African battlefront, was delayed in transmission. Since it was filed Mackenzie has resumed his tour of the eastern war zones and is now in Palestine).

By DeWITT MACKENZIE

Cairo, Dec. 22 (Delayed)—Lieutenant-General Frank M. Andrews, commander in chief of American forces in the Middle East, assures me that while it will take hard fighting to oust the Axis from Africa, Field Marshal General Erwin Rommel has been so thoroughly whipped he no longer is a menace to Egypt and the Suez Canal.

Now, opinions on war are a piastre a dozen these days—and that's four cents. However, I repeat Andrews' estimate because this famous fighting man, among Uncle Sam's most distinguished soldiers, exhibits a solidarity that inspires confidence in his views.

I'm not the only one who feels that way, for I understand he has created a most favorable impression since he assumed command here a few weeks ago.

"Everything in the general picture is very encouraging," he told me in his quiet but direct and positive way.

"Rommel has been given a hard trouncing. He never again can come back into Egypt. I couldn't even imagine it. He has been licked."

I asked General Andrews how long he thought it would take to finish the job by driving the Germans into the sea. He shook his head.

"I wouldn't want to make that prediction. Rommel must be annihilated—made to stand and fight—or rendered impotent by having his supplies cut off.

"He waits until you get all set to strike him and then pulls out. He's clever at it, but he's playing a dangerous game. Let him slip once and the allies will get him.

"We can render the Axis helpless both in this theatre and in Tunisia but cutting off their resources from the continent. This is a battle of supplies, and we must blockade the Axis so they can't carry on. We can do it because we have superiority in the air and on the sea."

Caught at Headquarters

I caught Andrews at his headquarters just as he arrived from a two-hour conference with the British war council. He obviously was tired, for it was the end of a long day. He looked, however, every inch a soldier. Those three silver stars on his square shoulder set off to advantage his handsome shock of iron grey hair. Presumably he still had the conference on his mind, for he remarked: "The British have a wonderful organization here in Egypt."

I jumped at that opening head first. "Tell me how we are getting along with our allies here," I said. "Do Americans and British like each other? Are we developing a friendship which promises well for that vital post-war cooperation? Now if those questions embarrass you at all let's just forget them altogether, because I don't write propaganda for anybody! I'm looking for a candid opinion."

"I'm glad to answer," he returned, "because I like the British, and the two forces are getting along fine together.

"We are getting to know each other. Our allies like plain talk

Riches Await Man Who Thinks Up Good War-Time Garbage Receptacle

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—The guy who builds a better substitute garbage pail may become the home health hero of the war.

And plenty rich besides.

But he's going to have to take the garbage pail seriously and approach the problem without holding his nose.

That's the opinion of Dr. George A. Soper, internationally known public health engineer who now is a consultant with the Federal Public Housing Authority.

With steel going into the war, manufacture of galvanized steel garbage pails probably is out for the duration, Dr. Soper said today. He predicted that a shortage soon would develop into a major health problem unless a suitable substitute is found.

"Garbage," he said, "is just one of those things. Nobody wants to know about it. Nobody wants to see it. Nobody wants to think about it. But garbage has an awkward way of forcing itself upon your attention after a while.

"It's simply amazing," he added, "how little people know about the requirements for a good garbage pail."

Manufacturers have suggested square cans, impossible to clean, said Dr. Soper. They've submitted fiber ones, double-handled baskets, heavy wooden barrels and other containers—but he says most of them won't stand the weather. The best bet yet is a round barrel made of Douglas fir plywood and given five coats of special acid-resisting paint, he said.

But he's still looking for a better one — and if anybody has any ideas, he figures that folks with folding money will beat a path to the back door of the man who builds the garbage pail.

Million Men Face Trap in Red Region

French Push Ahead

French Troops Reach Point 40 Miles From Sousse

By ROGER D. GREENE
(Associated Press War Editor)

Adolf Hitler's armies fell back on three great battlefronts in the war today—in Russia, Libya and Tunisia—as Allied troops were reported to have advanced within 12 miles of Tunis and the British army of the Nile captured Sirte after a 180-mile drive westward.

On the Soviet front, the Germans retreated in half a dozen key sectors, with the Russians scoring at least two 15-mile advances and listing 108,060 Germans killed or captured on the middle Don steppes alone.

German field headquarters said the Red armies were attacking continuously in the middle Don and in the Don-Volga corridor before Stalingrad, but declared the Soviets were halted and thrown back at many points.

A Nazi communique also reported that the Russians had renewed attacks in force, with planes, tanks and strong artillery support, in the Velikie Luki sector northwest of Moscow.

Dispatches indicated that the plight of nearly 1,000,000 Axis troops faced with entrapment in southern Russia was growing hourly more critical.

On the North African front, British headquarters announced that Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's triumphant British 8th Army had captured the port of Sirte, 180 miles west of the old El Agheila line, in pursuit of Nazi Field Marshal Edwin Rommel's broken Africa Corp.

Sirte lies about 210 miles east of Tripoli, the last major Axis citadel in Libya.

"Our troops occupied Sirte at mid-day yesterday and are in contact with the enemy, who are withdrawing to the west," a British war bulletin said.

British vanguards were reported to have pushed as far as 70 miles beyond Sirte.

Simultaneously, the Algiers radio reported that vanguards of the Allied expeditionary forces in Tunisia had reached a point within 12 miles of Tunis, the capital.

The key town of Teboura, which the Allies captured and then lost three weeks ago, lies about 12 miles west of Tunis, but there was no immediate specific indication whether that was the point the Allies were storming.

Italian headquarters reported "intense activity" in Tunisia.

Earlier reports had said the campaign was bogged down anew in winter rains, with the Allies clinging fast to a newly-captured height 30 miles southwest of Tunis and six miles northeast of Medjez-El-Bab after beating off Axis counterattacks.

French Drive Ahead

French troops driving toward the Gulf of Gabes coast below Tunis were reported to have advanced within 40 miles of the gulf port of Sousse, threatening to cut the land link between German and Italian troops fighting in the Bizerte-Tunis zone along the northern coast and those in Tripoli.

While the last days of the year witnessed an ever-brightening picture for the allies in North Africa, Russia's great war machine trampled roughshod over the Nazis across a 1,000-mile battle line from Velikie Luki in the north to the snow-blanketed Halchik plateau in the deep Caucasus.

Bulletins from Red army headquarters cited the following spectacular gains achieved by the Russians:

Recaptured 49 settlements and railway stations, as well as dozens of towns, in the all-important middle Don offensive.

Drove back into the Ukraine in two different sectors, north and west of Millerovo.

Recaptured one of the biggest factories in the Stalingrad industrial district, captured or destroyed 19 blockhouses and 57 dugouts and killed 500 Germans.

Advanced 15 miles in the strategic Kotelnikovski sector, 90 miles southwest of Stalingrad, capturing eight villages, killing 9,000 Germans, and seizing or destroying 300 tanks, 268 planes and 180 guns in a 12-day battle.

Advanced 15 to 18 miles in a

Fourteen Japanese planes were shot down out of the skies and 10 other destroyed on the ground without damage to a single U. S. plane.

On the New Guinea front, trapped Japanese forces still held out on a mile-long sector along the Papuan beach at Buna, with American and Australian troops slowly moving in against the enemy's strongly fortified defenses.

Stewart Field Man Dies

New York, Dec. 26 (AP)—A soldier identified as Private Elliott B. Goulet, 33, attached to the air base at Stewart Field, West Point, was killed today when he toppled into the path of a subway train at an upper Manhattan station. Dennis Daly, motorman, said he saw the soldier fall to the tracks in front of the train and applied the brakes immediately. Several cars passed over the victim before the train could be stopped, police said. Identification was made by an Army pass and other papers found on the body.

Car Demolishes Boy's Sled

Edward C. Kiewlicz of Grand Gorge, reported to the police department Thursday afternoon that while driving south on East Chester street, and just as he was passing another car, a boy and a sled appeared in the road before him and before he could halt his car it had struck the sled, demolishing it. The boy who was pulling his sled across the road, was not hit. He said that the boy was named Vitarius, of 129 East Chester street.

Young Men Are Best for Military Service, Medicos and Others Agree

Chicago, Dec. 26 (AP) — Young men are the best fitted to withstand the grueling tasks exacted in military service, just as they are in athletics, a group of medical men, physical directors and military officials agree.

Their opinions, gathered in a symposium, differ, however, as to the reasons.

Discussing the halting of induction of men over 38 years old into the armed forces, Dr. J. R. Miller, dean of the Northwestern University College of Medicine, said today that "men in their thirties do not have the resiliency of youth. This is evident in sports, where few men are active after 38."

Dr. Miller said that noticeable body degeneration begins in the third decade of life, and that "many athletes begin to lose their resiliency in the late twenties. Young men can sleep on the ground and undergo other hardships encountered in the army and come back fit the next day, but those in the third decade can't."

Dr. John S. Coulter, former army physician, asserted that "this is not a war for men over 40. Proof of unfitness is shown when they come to the obstacle courses now in use to harden them. Older men can't even stand doubletime marching."

Erwin Beyer, instructor of physical education who is training 400 air force cadets at the University of Chicago, said that strength in men reaches its zenith between the ages of 20 and 29 and then subsides gradually. He believes general endurance reaches its peak in men between 25 and 35.

"Strength and endurance may be compared," he explained. "Strength localizes one part of the

By FRANCIS M. Le MAY

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—Rep. Doughton (D-N.C.), chairman of the powerful House Ways and Means committee, said today he favored putting federal income tax collection on a "pay-as-you-go" basis but expressed opposition to the Ruml plan which would wipe out a year's taxes to achieve that objective.

A "pay-as-you-go" proposal seem certain to come up when the Ways and Means committee begins consideration of a new tax bill shortly after congress convenes next month.

"In view of the unprecedented burden on the federal treasury in wartime," Doughton said of the Ruml plan, "I cannot see how we can erase several billions of dollars the taxpayers owe the government on their individual incomes for any one year.

"The nation's financial integrity must be maintained. I think that in protecting the credit of my government I am protecting myself, my family, and all of the people."

Under the plan advanced by Beardsley Ruml, chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, income taxes on the previous year's earnings would be wiped out and payments would be made on the current year's taxes through weekly or monthly deductions from an individual's earnings. Special provisions would be made for business men and others whose incomes were not in the form of regular salary checks.

The Ruml plan was proposed as part of the $25,000,000,000 tax bill written last year, but was discarded because of Treasury Department objections to forgiving 1942 taxes.

Senator Clary (D-Mo) chairman of a finance subcommittee which recommended the Ruml proposal, said recently enactment of a plan to shift tax payments to a current year basis seemed "inevitable."

Doughton said the greatest obstacle in changing to a current payment basis was finding out how the individual, without undue burden could start paying taxes for the current year and at the same time pay the tax for the previous year, which now becomes due on March 15.

He said many persons who do not set aside a sufficient portion of their previous year's income to pay the tax in March were in the habit of deducting from their current incomes to meet the preceding year's taxes.

In addition, he said, there would be difficulty in determining what each person would pay weekly or monthly under the curo payment plan. Business and professional men and farmers especially, he explained, could not estimate with any certainty the amount of their income for the year ahead. Weekly or monthly payments would be based on those estimated.

Commission Established

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—President Roosevelt today established a typhus commission to protect members of the armed forces from typhus fever both here and abroad. The commission will serve with the army and will consist of a director to be appointed by the secretary of war, and officers of the army medical corps, navy medical corps and public health service.

Cars Are Damaged

It was reported to the police department Friday evening that while the automobile of Theodore Leminster of 59 Gill street was parked in front of the house that it was struck by an auto operated by Augustus Stopski of 187 Fourth avenue. Both cars were damaged but no personal injuries were reported.

Bitten by Dog

Thomas Hyman of 151 Smith avenue reported to the police department Thursday that he had been bitten in the finger by a dog owned by William F. Crosby of 17 Ardsley street. He said he had the wound treated at the Kingston Hospital.

War Stamps Are Lost

Thursday afternoon while delivering papers one of The Freeman carriers lost a number of War Savings Stamps between Belvedere street and Beck's Market on Broadway. The finder is asked to return them or notify The Freeman branch office on Fair street.

Gas and Oil Price Jump Declared

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—Gasoline dealers over the country were granted permission by the Office of Price Administration today to sell at a 3-cent retail margin over cost, a margin which has been allowed Atlantic seaboard filling stations since last May.

The action thus permits dealers whose prices are now frozen at each station's level of October 1-15, 1941, to increase their prices if they provide a margin of less than three cents.

Such an increase is not mandatory, it was emphasized by an O. P. A. spokesman, but will allow dealers whose prices were frozen at an unprofitably low level—because of local price wars or other reasons—to get back to a profit making margin.

A minority of dealers will be affected, O. P. A. said.

The action was described as "part of O. P. A.'s program to aid small business establishments to withstand the impact of war time expedients," and to help retailers to stay in business despite the curtailment in sales volume caused by rationing.

Meanwhile it was expected that O. P. A. would take some action soon to relieve eastern dealers whose sales volume has been sharply cut by the reduction in value of all passenger car ration coupons from four gallons to three.

Such price relief was requested Thursday by Harry Wainwright, an official of organized retail stations in Washington and Baltimore, who said the 25 per cent drop in sales volume was making it impossible for many dealers to keep open. Wainwright said his discussion with O. P. A. officials was on a coast-wide, rather than a purely local basis, indicating that if relief were granted it would apply

Traffic Accidents Result in 99 Fatalities; Last Year's Toll 431

(By The Associated Press)

Violent death came to 178 persons throughout the nation during the Christmas holidays, with traffic accidents accounting for 99 fatalities, reports recorded today showed.

High as the total was, it appeared that the nation had enjoyed one of its safest Christmas holidays in years. By dawn of December 26 last year, 431 deaths had been listed. Of that number 334 lives were lost in automobile and other vehicles.

The fact that there were fewer cars on the highways because of tire shortages and gasoline rationing was believed partly responsible for the smaller number of traffic fatalities during this Yuletide period compared with last year.

An Associated Press compilation showed that California had the greatest number of accidental deaths for this year's Christmas holidays, with 27. Illinois was second with 19 and New York and Ohio each had 15.

Rommel No Longer Is Threat to Suez, Gen. Andrews Says

However, Allies Face Hard Fight, He Says, Before Axis Can Be Driven From Africa

(The following dispatch from DeWitt Mackenzie, written in Cairo after his visit to the African battlefront, was delayed in transmission. Since it was filed Mackenzie has resumed his tour of the eastern war zones and is now in Palestine).

By DeWITT MACKENZIE

Cairo, Dec. 22 (Delayed)—Lieutenant-General Frank M. Andrews, commander in chief of American forces in the Middle East, assures me that while it will take hard fighting to oust the Axis from Africa, Field Marshal General Erwin Rommel has been so thoroughly whipped he no longer is a menace to Egypt and the Suez Canal.

Now, opinions on war are a piastre a dozen these days—and that's four cents. However, I repeat Andrews' estimate because this famous fighting man, among Uncle Sam's most distinguished soldiers, exhibits a solidarity that inspires confidence in his views.

I'm not the only one who feels that way, for I understand he has created a most favorable impression since he assumed command here a few weeks ago.

"Everything in the general picture is very encouraging," he told me in his quiet but direct and positive way.

"Rommel has been given a hard trouncing. He never again can come back into Egypt. I couldn't even imagine it. He has been licked."

I asked General Andrews how long he thought it would take to finish the job by driving the Germans into the sea. He shook his head.

"I wouldn't want to make that prediction. Rommel must be annihilated—made to stand and fight—or rendered impotent by having his supplies cut off.

"He waits until you get all set to strike him and then pulls out. He's clever at it, but he's playing a dangerous game. Let him slip once and the allies will get him.

"We can render the Axis helpless both in this theatre and in Tunisia but cutting off their resources from the continent. This is a battle of supplies, and we must blockade the Axis so they can't carry on. We can do it because we have superiority in the air and on the sea."

Caught at Headquarters

I caught Andrews at his headquarters just as he arrived from a two-hour conference with the British war council. He obviously was tired, for it was the end of a long day. He looked, however, every inch a soldier. Those three silver stars on his square shoulder set off to advantage his handsome shock of iron grey hair. Presumably he still had the conference on his mind, for he remarked: "The British have a wonderful organization here in Egypt."

I jumped at that opening head first. "Tell me how we are getting along with our allies here," I said. "Do Americans and British like each other? Are we developing a friendship which promises well for that vital post-war cooperation? Now if those questions embarrass you at all let's just forget them altogether, because I don't write propaganda for anybody. I'm looking for a candid opinion."

"I'm glad to answer," he returned, "because I like the British, and the two forces are getting along fine together.

Riches Await Man Who Thinks Up Good War-Time Garbage Receptacle

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—The guy who builds a better substitute garbage pail may become the home health hero of the war.

And plenty rich besides.

But he's going to have to take the garbage pail seriously and approach the problem without holding his nose.

That's the opinion of Dr. George A. Soper, internationally known public health engineer who now is a consultant with the Federal Public Housing Authority.

With steel going into the war, manufacture of galvanized steel garbage pails has been stopped for the duration, Dr. Soper said today. He predicted that a shortage soon would develop into a major health problem unless a suitable substitute is found.

"Garbage," he said, "is just one of those things. Nobody wants to know about it. Nobody wants to see it. Nobody wants to think about it. But garbage has an awkward way of forcing itself upon your attention after a while.

"It's simply amazing," he added, "how little people know about the requirements for a good garbage pail."

Manufacturers have suggested square cans. Impossible to clean, said Dr. Soper. They've submitted fiber ones, double-handled baskets, heavy wooden barrels and other containers—but he says most of them won't stand the weather. The best bet yet is a round barrel made of Douglas fir plywood and given five coats of special acid-resisting paint, he said.

But he's still looking for a better one — and if anybody has any ideas, he figures that folks with folding money will beat a path to the back door of the man who builds the garbage pail.

Million Men Face Trap in Red Region

French Troops Reach Point 40 Miles From Sousse

By ROGER D. GREENE
(Associated Press War Editor)

Adolf Hitler's armies fell back on three great battlefronts in the war today—in Russia, Libya and Tunisia—as Allied troops were reported to have advanced within 12 miles of Tunis and the British army of the Nile captured Sirte after a 180-mile drive westward.

On the Soviet front, the Germans retreated in half a dozen key sectors, with the Russians scoring at least two 15-mile advances and listing 108,060 Germans killed or captured on the middle Don steppes alone.

German field headquarters said the Red armies were attacking continuously in the middle Don and in the Don-Volga corridor before Stalingrad, but declared the Soviets were halted and thrown back at many points.

A Nazi communique also reported that the Russians had renewed attacks in force, with planes, tanks and strong artillery support, in the Velikie Luki sector northwest of Moscow.

Dispatches indicated that the plight of nearly 1,000,000 Axis troops faced with entrapment in southern Russia was growing hourly more critical.

On the North African front, British headquarters announced that Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's triumphant British 8th Army had captured the port of Sirte, 180 miles west of the old El Agheila line, in pursuit of Nazi Field Marshal Edwin Rommel's broken Africa Corp.

Sirte lies about 210 miles east of Tripoli, the last major Axis citadel in Libya.

"Our troops occupied Sirte at mid-day yesterday and are in contact with the enemy, who are withdrawing to the west," a British war bulletin said.

British vanguards were reported to have pushed as far as 70 miles beyond Sirte.

Simultaneously, the Algiers radio reported that vanguards of the Allied expeditionary forces in Tunisia had reached a point within 12 miles of Tunis, the capital.

The key town of Teboura, which the Allies captured and then lost three weeks ago, lies about 12 miles west of Tunis, but there was no immediate specific indication whether that was the point the Allies were storming.

Italian headquarters reported "intense activity" in Tunisia.

Earlier reports had said the campaign was bogged down anew in winter rains, with the Allies clinging fast to a newly-captured height 30 miles southwest of Tunis and six miles northeast of Medjez-El-Bab after beating off Axis counterattacks.

French Drive Ahead

French troops driving toward the Gulf of Gabes coast below Tunis were reported to have advanced within 40 miles of the gulf port of Sousse, threatening to cut the land link between German and Italian troops fighting in the Bizerte-Tunis zone along the northern coast and those in Tripoli.

While the last days of the year witnessed an ever-brightening picture for the allies in North Africa, Russia's great war machine trampled roughshod over the Nazis across a 1,000-mile battle line from Velikie Luki in the north to the snow-blanketed Halchik plateau in the deep Caucasus.

Bulletins from Red army headquarters cited the following spectacular gains achieved by the Russians:

Recaptured 49 settlements and railway stations, as well as dozens of towns, in the all-important middle Don offensive.

Drove back into the Ukraine in two different sectors, north and west of Millerovo.

Recaptured one of the biggest factories in the Stalingrad industrial district, captured or destroyed 19 blockhouses and 57 dugouts and killed 500 Germans.

Advanced 15 miles in the strategic Kotelnikovski sector, 90 miles southwest of Stalingrad, capturing eight villages, killling 9,000 Germans, and seizing or destroying 300 tanks, 268 planes and 160 guns in a 13-day battle.

Advanced 15 to 18 miles in a

Northern Island Is Transformed by Army in 100 Days

Barren Lands Become New Airfield; Streams Are Turned; Library Is in Working Order

By WILLIAM L. WORDEN

An army base in the Andreanof Islands, Dec. 10 (Delayed) (AP)—After a hundred days and a bombing, this looks like a different island.

When the first wave of troops pushing United States army and air bases closer to the Japanese-occupied western Aleutians came ashore on this treeless, grassy island shortly after the first of September, I came with them.

There was literally nothing here. One abandoned trapper's shack huddled in a cove but, except for that, there was no sign that any other human had occupied the seashore, the meadows of belt-high grass or the fog-shrouded mountains. There were no paths, no trails, nothing but tundra and grass and sand.

Today, the hills by which we set our courses across country in September have suffered one of two fates—they either are civilized or gone, literally gone. If a hill suited the army, huts were built on it, guns mounted on its crest, tents pitched on its sides. If a hill was in the army's way, the army moved the hill. Frequently, it was simpler than going around.

Streams which interfered with military activities have been turned around and made to run the other way. (What will happen to the confused salmon who returns next year to the river mouth he remembers is not clear, because the mouth is now a couple of miles away and on another ocean bay.)

For ten days in September, an overturned canvas boat being made to do for quarters brought envious glances from lieutenants and colonels alike. It was as roomy as the average cave built in a single night, and considerably more dry.

Today, the officer who does not sleep in a winterized tent with a coal stove—or a sound building with oil heat and electric lights—either has absolutely no influence or is assigned to the far suburbs of this 100 per cent military city.

Where there were no trails, there is now a network of usable roads, not paved too smooth, but roads nonetheless to get men from beaches to camps, from camps to possible fighting areas.

The airfield was a dream from the beginning: Four days after the landing, a plane touched its wheels to the new field. A bare 12 days later, it was the starting point for an integrated raid which began ruining the Japanese air force and land installations at Kiska.

Today, this field is living up to its early promise. Fleets of planes take off from what was a tide flat in October. The grassy hills hide the nerve centers of an aerial system which is threatening to starve out what invading Japs are not killed by its bombs.

In September, a comparatively few men were for days at the mercy of any Japanese planes which might have come across the hills. None came in those critical periods when munitions and equipment piled on the beaches offered dream targets for almost any kind of a plane and only a few guns were prepared to resist aerial attack. When a plane did come, weeks later, it was too late. A few bombs were dropped, a few soldiers, weary with months of training and building, got their first view of an enemy aircraft. But no damage was done, no personnel either injured or killed.

Today, in the welter of construction which still goes on, night and day, across the snowy island, even the craters left by those bombs are obliterated under new roads, airfields, gun emplacements and living quarters.

Cargo moves across docks now where in September men unloaded barges in waist-deep water. Ships come and go unchallenged in waters where a hundred days ago no ship was believed safe without a destroyer at its side.

On shore, men who stood in line for field rations in those first days of occupation stand in line now for books from the post library, and, among both officers and men, there is now as definite a social schism as in any frontier town.

The men who came in September are the old settlers, and each of them is ready at any opportunity to tell tall tales of how it was in the old days.

to the entire shortage area where the cut in coupon value is in effect. O. P. A. officials and Wainwright both stated no specific figure had been mentioned in discussing the requested increase.

Prior to rationing, the O. P. A. said, many stations had enough business to permit profitable operations on a margin smaller than three cents and their prices were frozen at the lower levels by maximum price regulations. Since rationing reduced their business, the O. P. A. said, "such stations are hard pressed to make operating expenses."

The O. P. A. also announced an increase of three-tenths of a cent per gallon in the retail price of fuel oil in 30 rationed states, effective next Tuesday. The increase was granted, O. P. A. explained, to "defray additional costs being incurred by dealers as the result of emergency contingencies."

Hull Says Darlan's Death Was 'Odious And Cowardly Act'

He Cautions We Must Not Be Diverted From Prime Objective for Control of Mediterranean

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—Secretary of State Hull said today that the asassination of Admiral Jean Darlan "was an odious and cowardly act" and cautioned that "we be not diverted for a moment from the supreme objective in the present battle against the Axis for the control of the African continent and the Mediterranean."

The secretary, replying to press conference questions, said "this battle is still at a crucial and critical stage. The fullest measure of unified support is needed by General Eisenhower and his associates."

Hull said that the part Admiral Darlan played in North Africa "related primarily to the military situation and was of incalculable aid to the allied armies in the battle which is still raging."

The text of the secretary's remarks in reply to a request for comment on the Christmas eve assassination of the French leader in North Africa follows:

"The all-important consideration is that we be not diverted for a moment from the supreme objective of the United Nations in the present battle against the Axis forces for control of the African continent and the Mediterranean. This battle is still at a crucial and critical stage. The fullest measure of unfied support is needed by General Eisenhower and his associates.

"Of Admiral Jean Darlan, it may be repeated that the part he played in North Africa related primarily to the military situation and was of incalculable aid to the Allied armies in the battle which is still raging. His assassination was an odious and cowardly act."

Barks in Musical Show

Camp Gruber, Okla. (AP)—The non-com probably never tumbled that he was giving an idea for a musical show when he barked his staccato "Hut-two-three-four." But Private Arthur Johnson, former song hit writer of Hollywood and New York, parked himself at the piano in Camp Gruber's Service Club No. 2 and proceeded to compose songs around that phrase. He had written "Pennies From Heaven," and "Cocktails for Two." and "I'm Sitting High on a Hilltop." The public that paid Johnson's royalties as a man in mufti won't hear his new songs, for the musical will be strictly for soldiers only. The theme song is "A Letter Marked Free" and the chorus opens like this: "I'm in a coma in Oklahoma, I don't know what the hell it's all about." Johnson took the name for this musical from the top sergeant's bark, namely, "Hut-Two-Three-Four."

New York, Dec. 26 (AP) — Many stocks continued to hold around the year's high level in today's short stock market session but others displayed a lack of rising power.

Attendance in boardrooms was small, following the usual post-Christmas precedent, although the few hardy customers who put in appearance leaned moderately to the bullish side. War news remained helpful for certain issues. Reinvestment demand provided a sustaining influence and some buying was attributed to the thought that a good year-end rally might develop.

Dealings were slow from the start except for blocks of low-priced stocks, apparently shifted for tax adjustment purposes. Advances of fractions to a point or so predominated near the final hour.

Top marks for 1942 were registered by Dome Mines, Air Reduction, International Harvester and Texas Co., among others. Supported were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Western Union, American Telephone, N. Y. Central, Homestake Mining, Goodrich, Sperry, Kennecott and Sears Roebuck. Occasional wavering inclinations were shown by General Motors, Anaconda, Santa Fe and Union Carbide.

Bonds were steady and commodities a shade improved.

Eight-Point Code To Guide Truck And Bus Owners

Requests for correction in certificates of war necessity by trucks, bus and taxicab owners should be made in person to the local O. D. T. district office or to one of the recently opened temporary field offices, William J. Hayes, Peekskill manager of the O. D. T. division of Motor Transport declared Wednesday in making public an eight-point C. W. N. appeals code. He urged farmers to apply to their local county war board transportation committee wherever possible.

Temporary field offices were opened early this week in 51 cities in New York, New Jersey and the New England states to supplement the assistance being provided C. W. N. users by the 19 O. D. T. district offices in this region.

Field offices and O. D. T. representatives in this area include Poughkeepsie, city hall, Charles Cassese; and Kingston, Farm Bureau, 74 John street, Winfred Adams.

O. D. T. representatives sitting in cities and towns in which there are no regular O. D. T. district offices will not issue corrected certificates but will make recommendations to their district offices where supplemental certificates will be issued. All such recommendations will be handled promptly.

The eight-point regional C. W. N. appeals code to guide truck, bus and taxicab owners follows:

First, do not apply for a correction until you have exhausted every effort to get along on your present C. W. N. allotment.

Second, estimate your additional requirements with a patriotic stringency.

Third, if you must have an increase in your allotment, request a change in your C. W. N. certificate immediately.

Fourth, do not file requests by mail if you can avoid it.

Fifth, call on an O. D. T. field representative, taking your original certificate with you, together with a 30 day statement on mileage travelled and oil consumed.

Sixth, if you are a farmer, apply for a corrected certificate through your county farm transportation committee or the nearest O. D. T. field or district office.

Seventh, if you cannot visit an O. D. T. field office write your O. D. T. district office for instructions.

Eighth and finally, take into consideration every opportunity for saving mileage; 5,000,000 commercial motor vehicles must get along on less than half as much rubber as they used up in 1941.

Plant Is Destroyed

South Attleboro, Mass., Dec. 25 (AP)—A large storage plant of the Rhode Island Cardboard Co., containing pulp and finished cardboard, was destroyed today in Attleboro's worst fire in a quarter of a century. Fire chief Fred A. Clark placed the loss at more than $200,000 and said he would ask the state fire marshall to investigate. Northern Island Is Transformed by Army in 100 Days

Barren Lands Become New Airfield; Streams Are Turned; Library Is in Working Order

By WILLIAM L. WORDEN

An army base in the Andreanof Islands, Dec. 10 (Delayed) (AP)—After a hundred days and a bombing, this looks like a different island.

When the first wave of troops pushing United States army and air bases closer to the Japanese-occupied western Aleutians came ashore on this treeless, grassy island shortly after the first of September, I came with them.

There was literally nothing here. One abandoned trapper's shack huddled in a cove but, except for that, there was no sign that any other human had occupied the seashore, the meadows of belt-high grass or the fog-shrouded mountains. There were no paths, no trails, nothing but tundra and grass and sand.

Today, the hills by which we set our courses across country in September have suffered one of two fates—they either are civilized or gone, literally gone. If a hill suited the army, huts were built on it, guns mounted on its crest, tents pitched on its sides. If a hill was in the army's way, the army moved the hill. Frequently, it was simpler than going around.

Streams which interfered with military activities have been turned around and made to run the other way. (What will happen to the confused salmon who returns next year to the river mouth he remembers is not clear, because the mouth is now a couple of miles away and on another ocean bay.)

For ten days in September, an overturned canvas boat being made to do for quarters brought envious glances from lieutenants and colonels alike. It was as roomy as the average cave built in a single night, and considerably more dry.

Today, the officer who does not sleep in a winterized tent with a coal stove—or a sound building with oil heat and electric lights—either has absolutely no influence or is assigned to the far suburbs of this 100 per cent military city.

Where there were no trails, there is now a network of usable roads, not paved too smooth, but roads nonetheless to get men from beaches to camps, from camps to possible fighting areas.

The airfield was a dream from the beginning. Four days after the landing, a plane touched its wheels to the new field. A bare 12 days later, it was the starting point for an integrated raid which began ruining the Japanese air force and land installations at Kiska.

Today, this field is living up to its early promise. Fleets of planes take off from what was a tide flat in October. The grassy hills hide the nerve centers of an aerial system which is threatening to starve out what invading Japs are not killed by its bombs.

In September, a comparatively few men were for days at the mercy of any Japanese planes which might have come across the hills. None came in those critical periods when munitions and equipment piled on the beaches offered dream targets for almost any kind of a plane and only a few guns were prepared to resist aerial attack. When a plane did come, weeks later, it was too late. A few bombs were dropped, a few soldiers, weary with months of training and building, got their first view of an enemy aircraft. But no damage was done, no personnel either injured or killed.

Today, in the welter of construction which still goes on, night and day, across the snowy island, even the craters left by those bombs are obliterated under new roads, airfields, gun emplacements and living quarters.

Cargo moves across docks now where in September men unloaded barges in waist-deep water. Ships come and go unchallenged in waters where a hundred days ago no ship was believed safe without a destroyer at its side.

On shore, men who stood in line for field rations in those first days of occupation stand in line now for books from the post library, and, among both officers and men, there is now as definite a social schism as in any frontier town.

The men who came in September are the old settlers, and each of them is ready at any opportunity to tell tall tales of how it was in the old days.

Gas and Oil Price Jump Declared

to the entire shortage area where the cut in coupon value is in effect. O. P. A. officials and Wainwright both stated no specific figure had been mentioned in discussing the requested increase.

Prior to rationing, the O. P. A. said, many stations had enough business to permit profitable operations on a margin smaller than three cents and their prices were frozen at the lower levels by maximum price regulations. Since rationing reduced their business, the O. P. A. said, "such stations are hard pressed to make operating expenses."

The O. P. A. also announced an increase of three-tenths of a cent per gallon in the retail price of fuel oil in 30 rationed states, effective next Tuesday. The increase was granted, O. P. A. explained, to "defray additional costs being incurred by dealers as the result of emergency contingencies."

Hull Says Darlan's Death Was 'Odious And Cowardly Act'

He Cautions We Must Not Be Diverted From Prime Objective for Control of Mediterranean

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—Secretary of State Hull said today that the asassination of Admiral Jean Darlan "was an odious and cowardly act" and cautioned that "we be not diverted for a moment from the supreme objective in the present battle against the Axis for the control of the African continent and the Mediterranean."

The secretary, replying to press conference questions, said "this battle is still at a crucial and critical stage. The fullest measure of unified support is needed by General Eisenhower and his associates."

Hull said that the part Admiral Darlan played in North Africa "related primarily to the military situation and was of incalculable aid to the allied armies in the battle which is still raging."

The text of the secretary's remarks in reply to a request for comment on the Christmas eve assassination of the French leader in North Africa follows:

"The all-important consideration is that we be not diverted for a moment from the supreme objective of the United Nations in the present battle against the Axis forces for control of the African continent and the Mediterranean. This battle is still at a crucial and critical stage. The fullest measure of unfied support is needed by General Eisenhower and his associates.

"Of Admiral Jean Darlan, it may be repeated that the part he played in North Africa related primarily to the military situation and was of incalculable aid to the Allied armies in the battle which is still raging. His assassination was an odious and cowardly act."

Barks in Musical Show

Camp Gruber, Okla. (AP)—The non-com probably never tumbled that he was giving an idea for a musical show when he barked his staccato "Hut-two-three-four." But Private Arthur Johnson, former song hit writer of Hollywood and New York, parked himself at the piano in Camp Gruber's Service Club No. 2 and proceeded to compose songs around that phrase. He had written "Pennies From Heaven," and "Cocktails for Two," and "I'm Sitting High on a Hilltop." The public that paid Johnson's royalties as a man in mufti won't hear his new songs, for the musical will be strictly for soldiers only. The theme song is "A Letter Marked Free" and the chorus opens like this: "I'm in a coma in Oklahoma, I don't know what the hell it's all about." Johnson took the name for this musical from the top sergeant's bark, namely, "Hut-Two-Three-Four."

New York, Dec. 26 (AP) — Many stocks continued to hold around the year's high level in today's short stock market session but others displayed a lack of rising power.

Attendance in boardrooms was small, following the usual post-Christmas precedent, although the few hardy customers who put in appearance leaned moderately to the bullish side. War news remained helpful for certain issues. Reinvestment demand provided a sustaining influence and some buying was attributed to the thought that a good year-end rally might develop.

Dealings were slow from the start except for blocks of low-priced stocks, apparently shifted for tax adjustment purposes. Advances of fractions to a point or so predominated near the final hour.

Top marks for 1942 were registered by Dome Mines, Air Reduction, International Harvester and Texas Co., among others. Supported were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Western Union, American Telephone, N. Y. Central, Homestake Mining, Goodrich, Sperry, Kennecott and Sears Roebuck. Occasional wavering inclinations were shown by General Motors, Anaconda, Santa Fe and Union Carbide.

Bonds were steady and commodities a shade improved.

Eight-Point Code To Guide Truck And Bus Owners

Requests for correction in certificates of war necessity by trucks, bus and taxicab owners should be made in person to the local O. D. T. district office or to one of the recently opened temporary field offices, William J. Hayes, Peekskill manager of the O. D. T. division of Motor Transport declared Wednesday in making public an eight-point C. W. N. appeals code. He urged farmers to apply to their local county war board transportation committee where-ever possible.

Temporary field offices were opened early this week in 51 cities in New York, New Jersey and the New England states to supplement the assistance being provided C. W. N. users by the 19 O. D. T. district offices in this region.

Field offices and O. D. T. representatives in this area include Poughkeepsie, city hall, Charles Cassese; and Kingston, Farm Bureau, 74 John street, Winfred Adams.

O. D. T. representatives sitting in cities and towns in which there are no regular O. D. T. district offices will not issue corrected certificates but will make recommendations to their district offices where supplemental certificates will be issued. All such recommendations will be handled promptly.

The eight-point regional C. W. N. appeals code to guide truck, bus and taxicab owners follows:

First, do not apply for a correction until you have exhausted every effort to get along on your present C. W. N. allotment.

Second, estimate your additional requirements with a patriotic stringency.

Third, if you must have an increase in your allotment, request a change in your C. W. N. certificate immediately.

Fourth, do not file requests by mail if you can avoid it.

Fifth, call on an O. D. T. field representative, taking your original certificate with you, together with a 30 day statement on mileage travelled and oil consumed.

Sixth, if you are a farmer, apply for a corrected certificate through your county farm transportation committee or the nearest O. D. T. field or district office.

Seventh, if you cannot visit an O. D. T. field office write your O. D. T. district office for instructions.

Eighth and finally, take into consideration every opportunity for saving mileage; 5,000,000 commercial motor vehicles must get along on less than half as much rubber as they used up in 1941.

Good Taste Today

By Emily Post

(Author of "Etiquette," "Children Are People," etc.)

SOMETIMES CONSENT TO BE MARRIED IS GIVEN FROM THE FRONT PEW.

Ordinarily the bride's father gives his consent to the marriage by taking the hand of his daughter and placing it in that of the bridegroom. But this is of course not practical in the situation described in today's letter: "My father is living but he is lame and could not possibly walk up the aisle with me. How could he give me away? Also who should walk with me?"

The answer is very simple: He either answers "I do" from his place in the front pew or from his wheel chair in front of the pew or the clergyman merely looks toward the father who bows his consent. This same answer applies if there is no father and the mother wishes to give her consent rather than have someone else give it for her. When consent is given from the pew this way the bride more often than not walks alone, but it is equally proper for her to walk up the aisle with any man relative or family friend, whom she chooses to select.

How Young Daughter Returns Kindnesses

Dear Mrs. Post: My little daughter was quite ill but is almost well again I am thankful to say. While she was shut in her room the girls in her school and the teacher were very kind to her—each day sending her something amusing which they either made in school or on occasion bought. I always sent my thanks of course with the children who brought it to the house. But never has anything else been done. What do you think would be the best to do for them?

Answer: Your daughter should write as nice a letter as she possibly can (helped by you if she is too young to write it alone), addressed to the teacher and the children. By and by when she is well again you can perhaps let her give a party, invite them all and give them very nice or especially amusing favors.

Widow Writes Own Wedding Invitations

Dear Mrs. Post: Does it make a difference who writes the notes of invitation to the wedding if this is taking place in the bride's own house? I was married and have been a widow and have stayed on in my house. My mother is going to be present at the wedding of course, and in addition there will be several dozen relatives and friends. But since this is not mother's house I am wondering if I shouldn't write the invitations. Ordinarily I believe the bride's mother does.

Answer: To her second marriage a widow writes her own invitations —always.

How to Protect Furniture From Guests

Dear Mrs. Post: How can I remind friends not to sit at my dining table and put their feet across pieces of the table. If my six year old child did it he would be punished but what can one do about friends.

Answer: You can't do anything except have snap-on covers (like cuffs) put on when you are expecting guests.

Arizona Justice of Peace Finds Marriages Drop

Yuma, Ariz., Dec. 25 (AP)—There was a time when Justice of the Peace R. H. Lutes wouldn't trade jobs with Gov. Sidney P. Osborn, but since gasoline rationing Lutes is glad he has an ice cream parlor as a sideline.

Operating the biggest ice cream and soft drink emporium here was a sideline in pre-war because about 20,000 couples per year crossed the Colorado river to escape California's law requiring three days notice of intention to wed.

"Christmas never is a very good day for marriages," Lutes asserted. "Yesterday I married only 18 couples. Marriages are off about 75 per cent here."

The members of the Hiltebrant Health for Victory club will meet, Monday evening, December 28, at 8 o'clock in the Y.M.C.A. Auditorium, Pine Grove avenue. Since meat rationing will probably start soon, the subject of the meeting will be meat shortages. It will show how careful intelligent meat buying and proper meat cooking will enable the householder to keep the family properly fed. The club believes it is the patriotic duty of every member to attend this meeting to learn how each can help the government in its share the meat program.

Farewell Dinner to Rev. and Mrs. Venno

The Men's Club of St. John's Episcopal Church tendered a farewell dinner to the Rector and Mrs. Venno at Judie's Saturday evening. Nearly 50 people partook of a specially prepared turkey dinner with "all the fixins".

President Heiser of the Men's Club acted as toastmaster and after dessert and coffee delivered a glowing tribute to Mr. Venno and Mrs. Venno, dwelling more on the gratitude felt by the entire congregation at having enjoyed the pleasant associations of the last few years than at the well disguised but genuine sorrow at parting.

Following his remarks and before introducing the other speakers Mr. Heiser on behalf of the Men's Club presented Mr. Venno with a beautiful wrist watch.

The other speakers, who each brought a brief message, were Robert D. Williams, choirmaster of the church, William Rose of the Prudential Insurance Company, the Rev. William J. McVey of the Presbyterian Church and a personal friend of Mr. Venno, and E. A. Chilson, a lay reader at St. John's.

After the singing of "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" and "Auld Lang Syne" the company were invited to the Parish House.

The Rev. Mr. Venno has been appointed to a chaplaincy in the U. S. Navy and expects to report for duty on or shortly after Christmas. Mrs. Venno with their two children, Ann and Paul, will reside at 16 John street for the present.

Presented With Brooch

At the farewell dinner for the Rev. and Mrs. Maurice Venno given by the Men's Club of St. John's Church at which time the Rev. Mr. Venno was presented with a wrist watch, the wives of the members of the club also presented Mrs. Venno with a cameo brooch.

Good Taste Today

By Emily Post

(Author of "Etiquette," "Children Are People," etc.)

SOMETIMES CONSENT TO BE MARRIED IS GIVEN FROM THE FRONT PEW.

Ordinarily the bride's father gives his consent to the marriage by taking the hand of his daughter and placing it in that of the bridegroom. But this is of course not practical in the situation described in today's letter: "My father is living but he is lame and could not possibly walk up the aisle with me. How could he give me away? Also who should walk with me?"

The answer is very simple: He either answers "I do" from his place in the front pew or from his wheel chair in front of the pew or the clergyman merely looks toward the father who bows his consent. This same answer applies if there is no father and the mother wishes to give her consent rather than have someone else give it for her. When consent is given from the pew this way the bride more often than not walks alone, but it is equally proper for her to walk up the aisle with any man relative or family friend, whom she chooses to select.

How Young Daughter Returns Kindnesses

Dear Mrs. Post: My little daughter was quite ill but is almost well again I am thankful to say. While she was shut in her room the girls in her school and the teacher were very kind to her—each day sending her something amusing which they either made in school or on occasion bought. I always sent my thanks of course with the children who brought it to the house. But never has anything else been done. What do you think would be the best to do for them?

Answer: Your daughter should write as nice a letter as she possibly can (helped by you if she is too young to write it alone), addressed to the teacher and the children. By and by when she is well again you can perhaps let her give a party, invite them all and give them very nice or especially amusing favors.

Widow Writes Own Wedding Invitations

Dear Mrs. Post: Does it make a difference who writes the notes of invitation to the wedding if this is taking place in the bride's own house? I was married and have been a widow and have stayed on in my house. My mother is going to be present at the wedding of course, and in addition there will be several dozen relatives and friends. But since this is not mother's house I am wondering if I shouldn't write the invitations. Ordinarily I believe the bride's mother does.

Answer: To her second marriage a widow writes her own invitations —always.

How to Protect Furniture From Guests

Dear Mrs. Post: How can I remind friends not to sit at my dining table and put their feet across pieces of the table. If my six year old child did it he would be punished but what can one do about friends.

Answer: You can't do anything except have snap-on covers (like cuffs) put on when you are expecting guests.

Arizona Justice of Peace Finds Marriages Drop

Yuma, Ariz., Dec. 26 (AP)—There was a time when Justice of the Peace R. H. Lutes wouldn't trade jobs with Gov. Sidney P. Osborn, out since gasoline rationing Lutes is glad he has an ice cream parlor as a sideline.

Operating the biggest ice cream and soft drink emporium here was a sideline in pre-war because about 20,000 couples per year crossed the Colorado river to escape California's law requiring three days notice of intention to wed.

"Christmas never is a very good day for marriages," Lutes asserted. Yesterday I married only 18 couples. Marriages are off about 75 per cent here."

HOME LIFE

Apparently there is going to be more home life than usual this winter. And perhaps for another winter or two after that. Already, day by day, there is less gadding about, less "going places and doing things." The travel and errands connected with Christmas may be the last free fling that people will enjoy for quite a while. This is not a mere layman's guess. Donald M. Nelson, who ought to know if anybody does, puts it up on the end of a stick.

"The mobility of consumers will be greatly restricted, both of necessity and by consumer choice. Travel by automobile is due for restriction much more drastic than that obtaining today. Travel by common carrier will be increasingly inconvenient and in some instances not permissible. Reduced variety of goods, price controls, the value of time to the individual, and the general level of consumer incomes, are among the factors which will reduce consumers' desire to 'shop around' or to buy at a distance from home."

So people in general may as well make up their minds to stay home and get acquainted with their families—that is, if they're not all working outside somewhere on conflicting schedules. There should be some people left at home, anyway. And really, they're not a bad lot at all, when you get to know them.

PEACE

There is a tradition that "peace on earth" literally existed everywhere on the day when the Savious was born. As the poet Milton wrote:

"No war, nor battle's sound, was heard the world around;
The idle spear and shield were high uphung.
The hooker chariot stood
Unstained with hostile blood;
The trumpet spake not to the armed throng;
And kings sat still with awful eye
As if they surely knew their sovereign Lord
was by."

Everywhere there was peace, and everywhere sweet music and great joy. And that is the way it should be on all Christmas Days, while the world lasts.

Well, it is good to read such words and think such thoughts, and to do things in harmony with them. Especially this year, when the world is filled with war and blood and suffering and hunger and fears for the future. One day's respite, at least, is allowable. Or better yet, a week's respite, to include New Year's Day with its ever-golden promise. Then civilization, refreshed, can brace itself for the struggle still to come against the powers of darkness.

It is a pleasant dream, all too soon followed by an awakening to stark reality. But hope dawns eternal. Evil cannot last forever. "Every day'll be Christmas bye and bye." At least every day will seem like Christmas, for quite a while, when this war is over.

DESTROYER OF AUSTRIA

"The evil that men do lives after them." This was certainly true of Count Berchtold, Austrian Foreign Minister from 1912 to 1915, who has just died. A lot of people and a lot of countries have been charged with starting the first world war, but one thing is sure: Berchtold and Austria sent the ultimatum to Serbia out of which the whole conflict grew.

Berchtold's daring predecessor, Aerenthal, had in 1908 by sheer audacity and German support annexed Bosnia and Herzegovina, and made protesting Russia back down. The less able Berchtold thought to do the same thing, not realizing that times had changed. In 1914 Russia felt stronger than in 1908, and refused to be bluffed. Other factors helped to start the war, but this is one that cannot be overlooked.

What did Berchtold, in his last years, think of his life work? He could hardly have enjoyed the fact that his mistakes destroyed his country.

CAR-SHARING

The importance of car-sharing among war workers and civilians is emphasized by George S. VanSchaick, regional director, who points to two events of the past week. These events are the shortage of gasoline supplies in the east caused by shipments to American forces in North Africa and the experience of Captain Eddie Rickenbacker.

"As Captain Rickenbacker pointed out last week-end in his appeal to those fighting the war at home," Mr. Van Schaick said, "the saving of one tire provides enough rubber for two or three life rafts—which might save the life of another group of men such as the six who spent twenty-three days with Capt. Rickenbacker in his Pacific ordeal."

"Like the boys in the Solomons for whom Captain Rickenbacker appealed, the American troops in North Africa must come first in our thoughts. They must be provided with gasoline and other supplies—even if it means complete elimination of pleasure driving. But, likewise, war workers at home must reach their plants if the front-line soldiers are to get the weapons they need. And one effective way of seeing that they continue to get to work is through car-sharing. It is one of the minor inconveniences which we at home can make for victory."

HAVE AND HAVE NOTS

The Axis powers like to speak of themselves as the Have-Nots. Probably they think it justifies their despoiling of their neighbors. They are Have-Nots indeed, but not in the sense in which they ordinarily think of the term. The Eighth Avenue Temple of Brooklyly says truly:

"We have free speech. They have not. We have free thinking. They have not. We have free teaching. They have not. We have respect for religion. They have not. We have reverence for human dignity. They have not. We have practices described as justice, charity, mercy. They have not. They have only the highest interests of the state. And because we, the Haves, have all these things, we have something for which to fight, today, now, right here."

EXCESSIVE PERSPIRATION

One of the annoying and embarrassing conditions which afflicts some individuals is excessive perspiration—top of head, feet, hands, under armpits and groin. I am not referring to the cases due to diseases such as tuberculosis.

Fortunately, most of the proprietary remedies for this condition are effective because they contain either formaldehyde or aluminum. Unfortunately, some of these remedies containing aluminum cause considerable skin irritation in some individuals who are sensitive or allergic to aluminum.

In some severe cases, one or two treatments by X-rays has been effective in preventing perspiration for months.

As aluminum chloride prevents perspiration and odor so effectively, two St. Louis physicians, Drs. Richard S. Weiss and Morris D. Marcus, felt that some effort should be made to make it less irritating to some skins and yet retain its power of preventing perspiration and odor. In Archives of Dermatology and Syphilology they state, "Considering that the harmful effects of aluminum chloride are probably due to its high acidity and caustic action, we felt that a compound with an organic acid might be effective and less harmful." Because zink phenolsulfonate had little caustic action it was tried by patch tests on the skin which showed that it was less harmful than the aluminum chloride. It was used in a special alcohol solution containing traces of perfume.

"Twenty-four persons with excessive perspiration of armpits were instructed to mop gently the perfumed 20 per cent solution of aluminum phenolsulfonate in the armpits every two days for several applications and then to use it every four or five days as needed. All of these patients reported relief shortly after the first few applications. No unusual irritation was encountered." In fairness to the proprietary preparations it must be said that 2 of the 24 found it not as effective as the proprietary (patent) preparation they had been using.

Fifteen persons were given a greaseless cream containing 20 per cent of aluminum phenolsulfonate. All found this cream effective with no skin irritation following its use.

The point is that the proprietary or patent preparations are effective in most cases but where they cause skin irritation, this aluminum phenolsulfonate solution or cream might be tried.

"AT CENTURY'S TURN"

By H. L. VAN DEUSEN

Older readers of The Freeman will recall in the years at the turn of the century the many articles written about the beauties of the sunsets in the Catskill Mountains which were published in these columns.

These articles which were always signed "Sunset Charlie" were written by Charles H. Safford, a veteran jeweler of Wall street, who was a great lover of nature. Mr. Safford died in his home on Wall street from an attack of pneumonia on December 28, 1928.

The jewelry business was established on Wall street by his father, Charles B. Safford, in 1856, and was carried on by his son after his father's death for many years. In later years Samuel D. Scudder, Jr., entered the business and the name was changed to Safford & Scudder, which name it still bears, Mr. Scudder having carried on the business since the death of his partner.

I also recall that in December, 1928, that the Fessenden shirt factory on Field Court was the first building in Kingston to be marked for the benefit of airmen flying over the city. The word "Kingston" was painted on the roof in letters 12 feet high.

And speaking of the Fessenden shirt factory I recall the many years that E. E. Fessenden was a member of the board of public works. Mr. Fessenden was deeply interested in aviation, and was deeply anxious that the city acquire an air field as he foresaw that it was only a question of a few years when airplanes would be a common sight over the city.

Older readers will recall the late Rev. Philip B. Strong, who was pastor of the Albany Avenue Baptist Church in the years at the turn of the century. The Rev. Mr. Strong was preaching the Sunday sermon on December 20, 1908, while burglars were busy stripping his home of all the silverware. He discovered the burglary when he returned home at the close of the service that night.

In December, 1928, the Central Business Men's Association, realizing the need of parking grounds for automobiles in the central section of the city, leased a plot of ground on Field Court for that purpose. The parking grounds were placed in use the following year.

One of the best known men in the coal business in Kingston in the years before the first World War was the late William R. Bennett of the North River Coal Co. on Thomas street. I recall that he was an ardent autoist, and at the annual meeting of the Ulster County Auto Club in December, 1918, he was re-elected president.

Dog Gets Deferred

Colorado Springs, Colo. (AP)—The fellow who walked into Magistrate Robert LaGrange's courtroom with a large dog, was sad. The bailiff read a paper accusing the fellow of harboring a dog that was a nuisance. Specifically he chased the neighbor's cat, a charge that might draw a death penalty. "It is this way," the fellow told the magistrate. "The dog belongs to my boy. He is leaving for the Army within a month or two. The boy and the dog have been pals for a good many years now. I don't want to separate them. "Perhaps after the boy leaves—" That's the way they left it.

A Township Trustee

Kansas City, Kas. (AP)—Muddled is the word for the political situation in Royal Township, Ford county. W. W. Adams and Otis Snyder tied in an election for the post of township trustee. Neither claimed the office. Weeks later county commissioners summoned both men. Only Adams showed up. The commissioners flipped a coin to decide the winner. Adams won. Then he said he didn't want the office. He resigned and left. The bewildered officials now are wondering if they can legally appoint Snyder to the job.

BABSON ON BUSINESS

A Christmas Message

Babson Says, "Let Nothing Plague Us"

Baltimore, Maryland, Dec. 25—Christmas began with the birth of a child. Now, for a day, let us men meet life in the spirit of childhood. During the Christmas Season we become less critical, more sympathetic and more joyful than at other times during the year. But this Christmas should have a deeper meaning for all of us. For the children, it will be a happy day. For us older folk,—well, perhaps for a little time we can forget and forgive ignorance, brutality and selfishness.

Uncertainty Natural

Many people sincerely believe that the world is going to the dogs. They are terribly frightened of war, disease and death and of social or economic changes. War and disease wait for no men. Even on Christmas Day fighting will continue and many men, women and children will die. Families everywhere, bereaved from whatever cause, we should remember in our prayers. I ask that they be not cast down, that they rejoice in the memories of loved ones and renew revitalize their lives in service to others.

No wonder people feel today as they do. They are burdened with doubt. Like Jeremiah, their "pain is perpetual." Even the most experienced are going through life ignorant of what is really going on. We are all in the same boat, confused and bewildered. There are forces at work throughout the world and perhaps even in our own country that may well spell disaster to the life and liberty for which our civilization has fought and which we, in particular have enjoyed. Yes, many things look black today. But we must remember that the very first Christmas dawned on a world just as bad as—in fact, very much worse than—ours.

Without Judgment

Personally, I am an incurable optimist. I believe that in spite of everything bad the world is getting better. Every day many of us do and say things for which a few hundred years ago we would have had our heads chopped off. Nations make mistakes just as individuals do, but I have faith even in my enemies. My children and grandchildren will happily be doing business with these Germans and Japanese. Like most individuals, all nations, including our own, will get back again on the right track. Most of us have thought Russia a terrible place. Now she is again recognizing the churches. She has pulled the political commissioners away from her armies. Her people are showing wonderful courage. Certainly, they must love their country and their leaders and believe in better things to come.

It is too easy to pass judgment upon what is taking place in the world today. In our planetary life, present events are occupying only an infinitesimal period of time. But we do know from history that out of all previous upheavals, from the over-running of Europe by the Mongolian Huns in the Fourth Century, B. C., up through the Middle Ages from 476 A. D.—1492, to modern times, much good has come from war. And people in those times did not know what was going on and what it was all about. Even now, with all our means of communication, we know very little of what is taking place. Furthermore, we have propaganda to contend with and to lead us astray. Hence, let us sit tight and trust God for final results.

Great Problems Ahead

There is in effect little that we can do except that which we believe is in accordance with our Christian teachings. There is no panacea; no short cut to the cure. Much of the world has been ill for a long time and now we are taking our medicine. But for this Christmas week, I should like to forget the drastic purges; forget the stock market, wages and hours; forget labor leaders, politicians, priorities and restrictions. Even forget on Christmas Day the Great Global War itself and all of the current day-to-day situations which rise to plague us. Surely Christmas is worthy of being set apart and observed in faith as an antidote to our confused times and lives.

Should the War end tomorrow, we would have great opportunities. The United Nations are to both win the War and win the peace. The leadership which will devolve largely upon the United States at the War's end is a wonderful responsibility. At the peace table I can see Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill. Very probably Mr. J. Stalin will be the dominating character. Mussolini will be absent but a real representative of the Italian people will be there; Japan may have no direct representative, but all the United Nations will be out in force. It may even be difficult to house them all!

Our Real Hope

It is my hope that the constructive business interests of all countries may be represented at the peace table. Also that this time some true men of God, with courage and vision, may help to lead us all out of the wilderness. Truly, we live in grand times. In the last analysis, it is our religious faith, of whatever creeds, that will bring the world back to sanity and to useful work and purpose. This is my 1942 Christmas Message.

Pope's Christmas Broadcast on Peace Is Hailed as Piece of Simple Magnificence

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Dec. 26—There is something at once magnificent and yet simple in the remarkable broadcast of Pope Pius concerning internal and external peace. The Vatican naturally cannot take sides in poltical disputes and hence must use implicit rather than explicit phrases.

Throughout all Christendom the message of the Pope strikes a note of hopefulness, because it strikes at the root of the evils that brought on the war and the stubbornness of the barriers that must be removed if a lasting peace is to be achieved.

Sentence after sentence is filled with meaning if the statesmen of the world will only examine themselves with the yardsticks of principle indicated by the Pope.

"Those who aim at building a new world must fight," he said, "for the right of free choice of government and of religious order. They must refuse that the state should make of individuals a herd of whom the state disposes as if they were lifeless things."

His holiness condemned the "legal positivism" which exaggerates the value of purely human laws and seeks to establish the supremacy of a particular nation, race or class, and he went on to say that such theories were of a nature which considered the state or its representatives "as the absolute authority, exempt from any criticism, even if their acts are in violation of Christian and human laws."

But if this seems to be a shaft aimed at the totalitarianism of European states, it might in its broadest sense represent a warning also to other states where class warfare, originated by the Marxian philosophy of socialism, still manage to promote friction and mutual distrusts.

"Peace," said the Pope, "must be not only an external peace among the nations of the world but internal peace. Inside each nation there must be unity and love."

The Pope remarked that the church "has always condemned Marzist socialism and today reaffirms that statement."

There is in the Pope's message a direct plea for constitutionalism—the maintenance of a government of law as against a regime of arbitrary power. Thus he declares:

"Whoever wants peace must co laborate for the deepest rein tegration of the social and judi cial order. As for the juridica rules given by God assure ever human being of protection agains arbitrary attacks, new and effec tive measures must be taken t this effect, namely the juridica safety of individuals. This may b obtained only by the creation o legal tribunals."

The Pope spoke especially of th causes of internal strife and stat ed, that the existing legal rule should not be changed by interna revolutions but that the state ad here strictly to rules protectin the individual.

There is in these passages a admonition against the all too fre quent tendency among the govern mental officers of various state and adherents to argue that th end justifies the means and tha if the maximum good, theoretica though it be, is attainable by over riding legal rules, that action i valid. On the contrary, such re volutionary tactics are decried a being the wrong way to remov injustices.

That the Pope is deeply con scious of socal injustices and be lieves they can be removed b proper methods is evidenced b the comment that "whoever wan peace must give back to work th place assigned to it by God and protect the worker and his fami ly with all the means modern so ciety is able to provide."

Continuing on the same point, His Holiness said the church cannot ignore the fact that th worker is still fighting agains some machinery which is not natural obstacle but an obstacl created by other human beings. He declared that "the worker must be assured of some privat property, especially a father with a big family."

There can be no doubt that th emphasis placed by the Pope on the penetrating problems of internal economics serves as a reminder that visions of world peace can be realized only if on the home front, among the countless millions whose neglect of duty brings on wars, a regeneration of the individual can be achieved—for institutions, whether governments or churches or organized bodies of any kind, fail if the individuals who comprise them fail.

Literary Guide

By JOHN SELBY

Some Books Behind The Guns— William Bradford Huie is among those to whom air power is not one of an equally valuable group of combat agencies, but the prime weapon. He believes, in spite of Hitler's failure over England and Britain's failure over Germany, that countries can be bombed out of the war, and he may be right. For me the important thing about Mr. Huie's "The Fight for Air-Power" is implicit in the title; the book shows our pitiful ignorance, our criminal neglect and what we have done about these two things since the world explosion blew open our eyes.

"The Red Army," by Michel Berchin and Eliahu Ben-Horn is the answer to the puzzle of the Red Army's toughness. It explains the development of the Russian army, its methods, its indoctrination. There is material on the commanders and a good deal on the campaigns up to the time of publication. There is also proof that the German spy system, theoretically omniscient, actually has a wonderful nose for red herring.

From 1775 to the present moment, the coming of war has meant first a tangle in shipping, and next a drastic revision of shipping habits to meet the emergency. Robert Greenhalgh Albion's "Sea Lanes in Wartime" deals for the most part with America's experience in the years before the present war, but the problems have bearing on today, and they are in the main very shrewdly presented. Dr. Albion is professor of history at Princeton, and very well known for his writing on maritime history.

In the air, Giulio Douhet's principles have been worked out with almost mathematical precision. He began writing about the technical side of air warfare in 1909, and what he wrote then has more immediacy and sounds more practical than some things I have read on the same subject in the last fe months. For various reasons, Dou het's "The Command of the Air" never has been published in English, although excerpts have appeared from time to time. Now the whole has been translated by Dino Ferrari, and the text supplied with enough footnotes to bring the book up to date. This is the Bible of airpower.

Washington In Wartime

By Jack Stinnett

Washington—If the consensus of non-partisan observers here means anything, Republican party leaders came off with a neat bit of strategy in naming Harrison E. Spangler, of Iowa, national chairman at that St. Louis committee session.

It is even said now (and apparently with some authority) that the selection of Spangler had already been planned and plotted in smoking room sessions in Washington long before the committee meeting was held.

The idea was not a "stop-Willkie" campaign or a boost-anybody-else drive. The idea was to select a man who could go along quietly and efficiently for a couple of years without stirring up a controversy within the party. The man they wanted was one who wasn't tarred with anybody's brush or stamped definitely with any "isms" except good old GOP.

Spangler was that man. If, on occasion, as it was reported, he had said publicly that after the war, the United States would have to take a greater hand in world affairs, he nullified that with his statement about being interested only in getting votes for the Republican party, of which there were none in Mongolia. On the other hand, that could hardly be held up as "isolationism."

It's no secret that Willkie is unpopular with many of the top Republican leaders. The vote he rolled up in the presidential election of 1940 hasn't won him many friends among party leaders that he didn't have before.

But that really wasn't the point, say the observers, in the selection of Spangler. The leader not only didn't want a Willkieite, they didn't want an "ite" of any kind.

GOP leaders here are convinced that Republicans are in in 194

As a result, it is said, the Republican party will probably just play dead duck for the next two years, coming to life only to fr away with Democratic issues that prove unpopular or to sail on with that portion of the Democratic flock (it's already split on several major issues) which has the favor of the voters.

Why else, say the observers, did Minority Leader Joe Martin give up the party national chairmanship, but to devote his entire time to manipulations of the party in the House? It is there, where their minority numbers within a few votes of the majority, that the 1944 election probably will be determined.

In the last year, there has been a lot of talk about the splits in the Republican party. Since the November elections and especially since intraparty squabbles among the Democrats broke out in the closing days of the 77th Congress, there's been a good deal more talk here about the possibility of a third party rising from the Democratic ranks.

HOME LIFE

Apparently there is going to be more home life than usual this winter. And perhaps for another winter or two after that. Already, day by day, there is less gadding about, less "going places and doing things." The travel and errands connected with Christmas may be the last free fling that people will enjoy for quite a while. This is not a mere layman's guess. Donald M. Nelson, who ought to know if anybody does, puts it up on the end of a stick.

"The mobility of consumers will be greatly restricted, both of necessity and by consumer choice. Travel by automobile is due for restriction much more drastic than that obtaining today. Travel by common carrier will be increasingly inconvenient and in some instances not permissible. Reduced variety of goods, price controls, the value of time to the individual, and the general level of consumer incomes, are among the factors which will reduce consumers' desire to 'shop around' or to buy at a distance from home."

So people in general may as well make up their minds to stay home and get acquainted with their families—that is, if they're not all working outside somewhere on conflicting schedules. There should be some people left at home, anyway. And really, they're not a bad lot at all, when you get to know them.

PEACE

There is a tradition that "peace on earth" literally existed everywhere on the day when the Savious was born. As the poet Milton wrote:

"No war, nor battle's sound, was heard the
world around;
The idle spear and shield were high uphung.
The hooker chariot stood
Unstained with hostile blood;
The trumpet spake not to the armed throng;
And kings sat still with awful eye
As if they surely knew their sovereign Lord
was by."

Everywhere there was peace, and everywhere sweet music and great joy. And that is the way it should be on all Christmas Days, while the world lasts.

Well, it is good to read such words and think such thoughts, and to do things in harmony with them. Especially this year, when the world is filled with war and blood and suffering and hunger and fears for the future. One day's respite, at least, is allowable. Or better yet, a week's respite, to include New Year's Day with its ever-golden promise. Then civilization, refreshed, can brace itself for the struggle still to come against the powers of darkness.

It is a pleasant dream, all too soon followed by an awakening to stark reality. But hope dawns eternal. Evil cannot last forever. "Every day'll be Christmas bye and bye." At least every day will seem like Christmas, for quite a while, when this war is over.

DESTROYER OF AUSTRIA

"The evil that men do lives after them." This was certainly true of Count Berchtold, Austrian Foreign Minister from 1912 to 1915, who has just died. A lot of people and a lot of countries have been charged with starting the first world war, but one thing is sure: Berchtold and Austria sent the ultimatum to Serbia out of which the whole conflict grew.

Berchtold's daring predecessor, Aerenthal, had in 1908 by sheer audacity and German support annexed Bosnia and Herzegovina, and made protesting Russia back down. The less able Berchtold thought to do the same thing, not realizing that times had changed. In 1914 Russia felt stronger than in 1908, and refused to be bluffed. Other factors helped to start the war, but this is one that cannot be overlooked.

What did Berchtold, in his last years, think of his life work? He could hardly have enjoyed the fact that his mistakes destroyed his country.

CAR-SHARING

The importance of car-sharing among war workers and civilians is emphasized by George S. Van Schaick, regional director, who points to two events of the past week. These events are the shortage of gasoline supplies in the east caused by shipments to American forces in North Africa and the experience of Captain Eddie Rickenbacker.

"As Captain Rickenbacker pointed out last week-end in his appeal to those fighting the war at home," Mr. Van Schaick said, "the saving of one tire provides enough rubber for two or three life rafts—which might save the life of another group of men such as the six who spent twenty-three days with Capt. Rickenbacker in his Pacific ordeal."

"Like the boys in the Solomons for whom Captain Rickenbacker appealed, the American troops in North Africa must come first in our thoughts. They must be provided with gasoline and other supplies—even if it means complete elimination of pleasure driving. But, likewise, war workers at home must reach their plants if the front-line soldiers are to get the weapons they need. And one effective way of seeing that they continue to get to work is through car-sharing. It is one of the minor inconveniences which we at home can make for victory."

HAVE AND HAVE NOTS

The Axis powers like to speak of themselves as the Have-Nots. Probably they think it justifies their despoiling of their neighbors. They are Have-Nots indeed, but not in the sense in which they ordinarily think of the term. The Eighth Avenue Temple of Brookly says truly:

"We have free speech. They have not. We have free thinking. They have not. We have free teaching. They have not. We have respect for religion. They have not. We have reverence for human dignity. They have not. We have practices described as justice, charity, mercy. They have not. They have only the highest interests of the state. And because we, the Haves, have all these things, we have something for which to fight, today, now, right here."

EXCESSIVE PERSPIRATION

One of the annoying and embarrassing conditions which afflicts some individuals is excessive perspiration—top of head, feet, hands, under armpits and groin. I am not referring to the cases due to diseases such as tuberculosis.

Fortunately, most of the proprietary remedies for this condition are effective because they contain either formaldehyde or aluminum. Unfortunately, some of these remedies containing aluminum cause considerable skin irritation in some individuals who are sensitive or allergic to aluminum.

In some severe cases, one or two treatments by X-rays has been effective in preventing perspiration for months.

As aluminum chloride prevents perspiration and odor so effectively, two St. Louis physicians, Drs. Richard S. Weiss and Morris D. Marcus, felt that some effort should be made to make it less irritating to some skins and yet retain its power of preventing perspiration and odor. In Archives of Dermatology and Syphilology they state, "Considering that the harmful effects of aluminum chloride are probably due to its high acidity and caustic action, we felt that a compound with an organic acid might be effective and less harmful." Because zink phenolsulfonate had little caustic action it was tried by patch tests on the skin which showed that it was less harmful than the aluminum chloride. It was used in a special alcohol solution containing traces of perfume.

"Twenty-four persons with excessive perspiration of armpits were instructed to mop gently the perfumed 20 per cent solution of aluminum phenolsulfonate in the armpits every two days for several applications and then to use it every four or five days as needed. All of these patients reported relief shortly after the first few applications. No unusual irritation was encountered." In fairness to the proprietary preparations it must be said that 2 of the 24 found it not as effective as the proprietary (patent) preparation they had been using.

Fifteen persons were given a greaseless cream containing 20 per cent of aluminum phenolsulfonate. All found this cream effective with no skin irritation following its use.

The point is that the proprietary or patent preparations are effective in most cases but where they cause skin irritation, this aluminum phenolsulfonate solution or cream might be tried.

"AT CENTURY'S TURN"

By H. L. VAN DEUSEN

Older readers of The Freeman will recall in the years at the turn of the century the many articles written about the beauties of the sunsets in the Catskill Mountains which were published in these columns.

These articles which were always signed "Sunset Charlie" were written by Charles H. Safford, a veteran jeweler of Wall street, who was a great lover of nature. Mr. Safford died in his home on Wall street from an attack of pneumonia on December 28, 1928.

The jewelry business was established on Wall street by his father, Charles B. Safford, in 1856, and was carried on by his son after his father's death for many years. In later years Samuel D. Scudder, Jr., entered the business and the name was changed to safford & Scudder, which name it still bears, Mr. Scudder having carried on the business since the death of his partner.

I also recall that in December, 1928, that the Fessenden shirt factory on Field Court was the first building in Kingston to be marked for the benefit of airmen flying over the city. The word "Kingston" was painted on the roof in letters 12 feet high.

And speaking of the Fessenden shirt factory I recall the many years that E. E. Fessenden was a member of the board of public works. Mr. Fessenden was deeply interested in aviation, and was deeply anxious that the city acquire an air field as he foresaw that it was only a question of a few years when airplanes would be a common sight over the city.

Older readers will recall the late Rev. Philip B. Strong, who was pastor of the Albany Avenue Baptist Church in the years at the turn of the century. The Rev. Mr. Strong was preaching the Sunday sermon on December 20, 1908, while burglars were busy stripping his home of all the silverware. He discovered the burglary when he returned home at the close of the service that night.

In December, 1928, the Central Business Men's Association, realizing the need of parking grounds for automobiles in the central section of the city, leased a plot of ground on Field Court for that purpose. The parking grounds were placed in use the following year.

One of the best known men in the coal business in Kingston in the years before the first World War was the late William R. Bennett of the North River Coal Co. on Thomas street. I recall that he was an ardent autoist, and at the annual meeting of the Ulster County Auto Club in December, 1918, he was re-elected president.

Dog Gets Deferred

Colorado Springs, Colo. (AP)—The fellow who walked into Magistrate Robert LaGrange's courtroom, with a large dog, was sad. The bailiff read a paper accusing the fellow of harboring a dog that was a nuisance. Specifically he chased the neighbor's cat, a charge that might draw a death penalty. "It is this way," the fellow told the magistrate. "The dog belongs to my boy. He is leaving for the Army within a month or two. The boy and the dog have been pals for a good many years now. I don't want to separate them. "Perhaps after the boy leaves—" That's the way they left it.

A Township Trustee

Kansas City, Kas. (AP)—Muddled is the word for the political situation in Royal Township, Ford county. W. W. Adams and Otis Snyder tied in an election for the post of township trustee. Neither claimed the office. Weeks later county commissioners summoned both men. Only Adams showed up. The commissioners flipped a coin to decide the winner. Adams won. Then he said he didn't want the office. He resigned and left. The bewildered officials now are wondering if they can legally appoint Snyder to the job.

BABSON ON BUSINESS

A Christmas Message

Babson Says, "Let Nothing Plague Us"

Baltimore, Maryland, Dec. 25—Christmas began with the birth of a child. Now, for a day, let us men meet life in the spirit of childhood. During the Christmas Season we become less critical, more sympathetic and more joyful than at other times during the year. But this Christmas should have a deeper meaning for all of us. For the children, it will be a happy day. For us older folk,—well, perhaps for a little time we can forget and forgive ignorance, brutality and selfishness.

Uncertainty Natural

Many people sincerely believe that the world is going to the dogs. They are terribly frightened of war, disease and death and of social or economic changes. War and disease wait for no men. Even on Christmas Day fighting will continue and many men, women and children will die. Families everywhere, bereaved from whatever cause, we should remember in our prayers. I ask that they be not cast down, that they rejoice in the memories of loved ones and renew revitalize their lives in service to others.

No wonder people feel today as they do. They are burdened with doubt. Like Jeremiah, their "pain is perpetual." Even the most experienced are going through life ignorant of what is really going on. We are all in the same boat, confused and bewildered. There are forces at work throughout the world and perhaps even in our own country that may well spell disaster to the life and liberty for which our civilization has fought and which we, in particular have enjoyed. Yes, many things look black today. But we must remember that the very first Christmas dawned on a world just as bad as—in fact, very much worse than—ours.

Without Judgment

Personally, I am an incurable optimist. I believe that in spite of everything bad the world is getting better. Every day many of us do and say things for which a few hundred years ago we would have had our heads chopped off. Nations make mistakes just as individuals do, but I have faith even in my enemies. My children and grandchildren will happily be doing business with these Germans and Japanese. Like most individuals, all nations, including our own, will get back again on the right track. Most of us have thought Russia a terrible place. Now she is again recognizing the churches. She has pulled the political commissioners away from her armies. Her people are showing wonderful courage. Certainly, they must love their country and their leaders and believe in better things to come.

It is too easy to pass judgment upon what is taking place in the world today. In our planetary life, present events are occupying only an infinitesimal period of time. But we do know from history that out of all previous upheavals, from the over-running of Europe by the Mongolian Huns in the Fourth Century, B. C., up through the Middle Ages from 476 A. D.—1492, to modern times, much good has come from war. And people in those times did not know what was going on and what it was all about. Even now, with all our means of communication, we know very little of what is taking place. Furthermore, we have propaganda to contend with and to lead us astray. Hence, let us sit tight and trust God for final results.

Great Problems Ahead

There is in effect little that we can do except that which we believe is in accordance with our Christian teachings. There is no panacea; no short cut to the cure. Much of the world has been ill for a long time and now we are taking our medicine. But for this Christmas week, I should like to forget the drastic purges; forget the stock market, wages and hours; forget labor leaders, politicians, priorities and restrictions. Even forget on Christmas Day the Great Global War itself and all of the current day-to-day situations which rise to plague us. Surely Christmas is worthy of being set apart and observed in faith as an antidote to our confused times and lives.

Should the War end tomorrow, we would have great opportunities. The United Nations are to both win the War and win the peace. The leadership which will devolve largely upon the United States at the War's end is a wonderful responsibility. At the peace table I can see Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill. Very probably Mr. J. Stalin will be the dominating character. Mussolini will be absent but a real representative of the Italian people will be there; Japan may have no direct representative, but all the United Nations will be out in force. It may even be difficult to house them all!

Our Real Hope

It is my hope that the constructive business interests of all countries may be represented at the peace table. Also that this time some true men of God, with courage and vision, may help to lead us all out of the wilderness. Truly, we live in grand times. In the last analysis, it is our religious faith, of whatever creeds, that will bring the world back to sanity and to useful work and purpose. This is my 1942 Christmas Message.

Pope's Christmas Broadcast on Peace Is Hailed as Piece of Simple Magnificence

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Dec. 26—There is something at once magnificient and yet simple in the remarkable broadcast of Pope Pius concerning internal and external peace. The Vatican naturally cannot take sides in poltical disputes and hence must use implicit rather than explicit phrases.

Throughout all Christendom the message of the Pope strikes a note of hopefulness, because it strikes at the root of the evils that brought on the war and the stubbornness of the barriers that must be removed if a lasting peace is to be achieved.

Sentence after sentence is filled with meaning if the statesmen of the world will only examine themselves with the yardsticks of principle indicated by the Pope.

"Those who aim at building a new world must fight," he said, "for the right of free choice of government and of religious order. They must refuse that the state should make of individuals a herd of whom the state disposes as if they were lifeless things."

His holiness condemned the "legal positivism" which exaggerates the value of purely human laws and seeks to establish the supremacy of a particular nation, race or class, and he went on to say that such theories were of a nature which considered the state or its representatives "as the absolute authority, exempt from any criticism, even if their acts are in violation of Christian and human laws."

But if this seems to be a shaft aimed at the totalitarianism of European states, it might in its broadest sense represent a warning also to other states where class warfare, originated by the Marxian philosophy of socialism, still manage to promote friction and mutual distrusts.

"Peace," said the Pope, "must be not only an external peace among the nations of the world but internal peace. Inside each nation there must be unity and love."

The Pope remarked that the church "has always condemned Marzist socialism and today reaffirms that statement."

There is in the Pope's message a direct plea for constitutionalism—the maintenance of a government of law as against a regime of arbitrary power. Thus he declares:

"Whoever wants peace must collaborate for the deepest reintegration of the social and judicial order. As for the juridical rules given by God assure every human being of protection against arbitrary attacks, new and effective measures must be taken to this effect, namely the juridical safety of individuals. This may be obtained only by the creation of legal tribunals."

The Pope spoke especially of the causes of internal strife and stated that the existing legal rules should not be changed by internal revolutions but that the state adhere strictly to rules protecting the individual.

There is in these passages an admonition against the all too frequent tendency among the governmental officers of various states and adherents to argue that the end justifies the means and that if the maximum good, theoretical though it be, is attainable by overriding legal rules, that action is valid. On the contrary, such revolutionary tactics are decried as being the wrong way to remove injustices.

That the Pope is deeply conscious of socal injustices and believes they can be removed by proper methods is evidenced by the comment that "whoever wan peace must give back to work the place assigned to it by God and protect the worker and his family with all the means modern society is able to provide."

Continuing on the same point, His Holiness said the church cannot ignore the fact that the worker is still fighting against some machinery which is not a natural obstacle but an obstacle created by other human beings. He declared that "the worker must be assured of some private property, especially a father with a big family."

There can be no doubt that the emphasis placed by the Pope on the penetrating problems of internal economics serves as a reminder that visions of world peace can be realized only if on the home front, among the countless millions whose neglect of duty brings on wars, a regeneration of the individual can be achieved—for institutions, whether governments or churches or organized bodies of any kind, fail if the individuals who comprise them fail.

Literary Guide

Some Books Behind The Guns— William Bradford Huie is among those to whom air power is not one of an equally valuable group of combat agencies, but the prime weapon. He believes, in spite of Hitler's failure over England and Britain's failure over Germany, that countries can be bombed out of the war, and he may be right. For me the important thing about Mr. Huie's "The Fight for Air Power" is implicit in the title; the book shows our pitiful ignorance, our criminal neglect and what we have done about these two things since the world explosion blew open our eyes.

"The Red Army," by Michel Berchin and Eliahu Ben-Horn is the answer to the puzzle of the Red Army's toughness. It explains the development of the Russian army, its methods, its indoctrination. There is material on the commanders and a good deal on the campaigns up to the time of publication. There is also proof that the German spy system, theoretically omniscient, actually has a wonderful nose for red herring.

From 1775 to the present moment, the coming of war has meant first a tangle in shipping, and next a drastic revision of shipping habits to meet the emergency. Robert Greenhalgh Albion's "Sea Lanes in Wartime" deals for the most part with America's experience in the years before the present war, but the problems have bearing on today, and they are in the main very shrewdly presented. Dr. Albion is professor of history at Princeton, and very well known for his writing on maritime history.

In the air, Giulio Douhet's principles have been worked out with almost mathematical precision. He began writing about the technical side of air warfare in 1909, and what he wrote then has more immediacy and sounds more practical than some things I have read on the same subject in the last fe months. For various reasons, Douhet's "The Command of the Air" never has been published in English, although excerpts have appeared from time to time. Now the whole has been translated by Dino Ferrari, and the text supplied with enough footnotes to bring the book up to date. This is the Bible of airpower.

Washington In Wartime

By Jack Stinnett

Washington—If the consensus of non-partisan observers here means anything, Republican party leaders came off with a neat bit of strategy in naming Harrison E. Spangler, of Iowa, national chairman at that St. Louis committee session.

It is even said now (and apparently with some authority) that the selection of Spangler had already been planned and plotted in smoking room sessions in Washington long before the committee meeting was held.

The idea was not a "stop-Willkie" campaign or a boost-anybody-else drive. The idea was to select a man who could go along quietly and efficiently for a couple of years without stirring up a controversy within the party. The man they wanted was one who wasn't tarred with anybody's brush of stamped definitely with any "isms" except good old GOP.

Spangler was that man. If, on occasion, as it was reported, he had said publicly that after the war, the United States would have to take a greater hand in world affairs, he nullified that with his statement about being interested only in getting votes for the Republican party, of which there were none in Mongolia. On the other hand, that could hardly be held up as "isolationism."

It's no secret that Willkie is unpopular with many of the top Republican leaders. The vote he rolled up in the presidential election of 1940 hasn't won him many friends among party leaders that he didn't have before.

But that really wasn't the point, say the observers, in the selection of Spangler. The leader not only didn't want a Willkieite, they didn't want an "ite" of any kind.

GOP leaders here are convinced that Republicans are in in 1944.

As a result, it is said, the Republican party will probably just play dead duck for the next two years, coming to life only to fly away with Democratic issues that prove unpopular or to sail in with that portion of the Democratic flock (it's already split on several major issues) which has the favor of the voters.

Why else, say the observers, did Minority Leader Joe Martin give up the party national chairmanship, but to devote his entire time to manipulations of the party in the House? It is there, where their minority numbers within a few votes of the majority, that the 1944 election probably will be determined.

In the last year, there has been a lot of talk about the splits in the Republican party. Since the November elections and especially since intraparty squabbles among the Democrats broke ou in the closing days of the 77t Congress, there's been a good deal more talk here about the possibility of a third party rising from the Democratic ranks.

Life in Kingston For Johnny Newcomer

New York, Dec. 23 (Special)—An average child, born at the present time to average Kingston parents, would find upon investigation that, war or no war, his future is carefully mapped out for him.

Johnny Newcomer, the typical new arrival, will discover first that he has a 27½-year-old mother and a 32-year-old father. Then he will find that he is one of a crop of about 480 new babies due in his city in the next 12 months, according to United States birth rate predictions.

He will have the usual children's illnesses—measles, colic and the like—which he will take in his stride. School days will begin when he is six years old. He will get a good educational background, for, being an average Kingston child, he will complete 8.4 years of school.

The time will come for him to earn a livelihood, and, looking about him, he will glow with satisfaction at the possibilities. For the city in which he lives is not just an average community. It is a thriving one with a high standard of living, where the typical family in 1941 had an income of $2,773, compared with the $2,272 average national incomes, a condition since improved.

Johnny will marry and have, statistically, 1.5 children, for Kingston families average 3.5 people. He will live to the age of 63, whereas his father, who was born in 1910, had a life expectancy of only 52 years.

Gliders are generally of wood frame construction.

Education

By MARGARET KERNODLE

U. S. education faces the fighting world at the end of 1942 ready to push reading, writing and 'rithmetic slightly to one side in favor of military might. Officials are considering a combination of the last year of high school with the first year of college.

Taking inventory, education authorities found that one-third of the college students in this country are 19 and 19-year-old boys and that college enrollment already has dropped 14 per cent. Enrollment has fallen off as much as 21 per cent in some teacher training schools, and the Office of Education is surveying the teacher shortage.

Colleges show a trend to accelerate their programs by giving up vacation to increase the year from 36 to 48 weeks. More than 2,000 high schools have started Victory Corps. Victory Garden plans laid the foundation for sending high school students to the aid of farmers in 1943.

Congress voted funds for two national war education programs: $5,000,000 for student loans, and $17,500,000 for special war vocation training. Funds were reserved by 279 colleges for 21,000 students at an average of $190 per student, 44 per cent for engineering, 21 per cent for medicine, 15 per cent for chemistry, nine per cent for dentists, 5½ per cent for pharmacists, four per cent for physicists and two per cent for veterinarians.

The vocation training fund for engineering, science, management or other wartime work was used by 199 colleges giving 5,149 courses for 12 to 16 weeks to 760,000 students.

Newest programs prepared by the War Department for distribution by the Office of Education in December were pre-induction courses for study in electricity needed for 150 army jobs, shopwork for 188 army jobs, machine instruction for 226 and radio for 35.

Plans to increase physical fitness in high school and college were started with manuals prepared by the Office of Education, which conducted institutes for educators in the Army service command areas.

To speed up teaching, the Office of Education produced 50 films and conducted a Tuesday radio program for the Victory Corps. The Wartime Commission recommended federal funds be alloted to supplement state and local funds to prevent teachers leaving their schools for better paying jobs.

Negro Must Be Integrated Into War Industries

"In order to build morale and to comply with the Civil Rights Laws of the state of New York, it is necessary that the Negro be integrated into war industries," Industrial Commissioner Frieda S. Miller declared yesterday at a press conference at which she announced the publication of an important new booklet on the subject.

The publication, entitled, "How Management Can Integrate Negroes in War Industries," is being issued next week by the State War Council's Committee on Discrimination in Employment of which Miss Miller is chairman.

In an introduction to the booklet, Miss Miller states, "America is engaged in an all-out war on the economic, psychological and war fronts. All must participate. Unless they do, we shall be in a tough spot.

"Negroes form 9.8 per cent of the population and 20 per cent of the relief rolls. It is incumbent upon us to employ this important part of the population. This has been validated by the President and our committee, and has already been confirmed by the practical experience of outstanding firms everywhere.

"This book has been prepared in order to give the industrial leaders of America who have not yet used all these Americans specific recommendations on how this can be done. They should read the index to see who, what, when, where and why."

Speaking on the plight of the Negro at her press conference, Miss Miller said, "The employment situation of the Negro in this state and in the nation is still extremely bitter. In New York city where Negroes form approximately 6.1 per cent of the population, they comprise 26 per cent of all unemployed persons. In Buffalo, where they are around 3 per cent of the population, they form approximately 20 per cent of those unemployed.

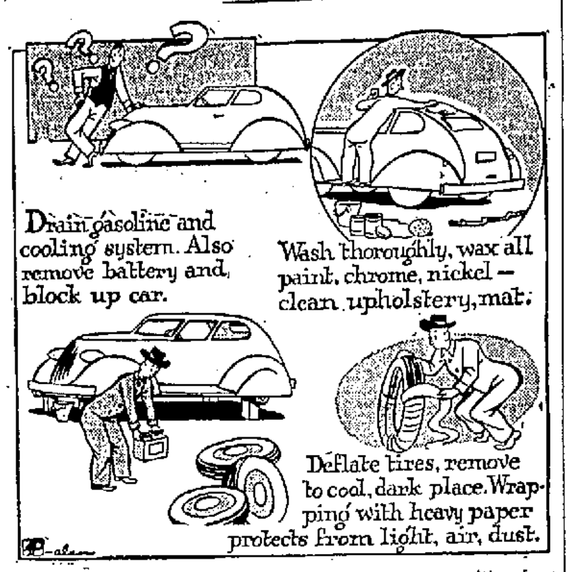
"Throughout the nation in the last year colored persons have comprised an increasing proportion of the unemployed because war workers have been drawn almost exclusively from the white labor force. It is now estimated that they constitute about 20 per cent of the unemployed, while they form only 9.8 per cent of the population.

"In 1941 in the state of New York more than 80 per cent of all Negro placements were in domestic and service occupations. Only about 1.3 per cent of all workers in war industries are colored and most of these are in unskilled jobs. The employment situation for the Negro, then, is thoroughly undesirable. It is especially dangerous during the present war, when we have taken our side against racial bigotry and where many of our allies are colored people.

"In upstate New York where a serious labor shortage is developing the Negro must be employed in order to produce to win the war. Elsewhere he must be employed because his present plight is dangerous to the morale of 9.8 per cent of our population and will be dangerous to the morale of approximately 9.8 per cent of our actual fighting force."

The booklet attempts to present concrete problems made by management in introducing Negroes into war industries and to offer practical methods for their successful integration.

Storage Can Harm Your Car, Say Experts; But if You Must Lay It Up, Here's How



Drain gasoline and cooling system. Also remove battery and, block up car.
Wash thoroughly, wax all paint, chrome, nickel—clean upholstery, mat;
Deflate tires, remove to cool, dark place. Wrapping with heavy paper protects from light, air, dust.

AP Features

If you're discouraged by gas rationing and balding tires that threaten to blow and are thinking of putting your car in storage for the duration—

Think twice. Storage may do more harm than good.

That's the advice given by the car service department of the American Automobile Association. T. E. Allen, department mananger, insists furthermore that "placing your car in storage is not in itself a patriotic contribution to the war effort," and that "maintenance of your car in proper and efficient running condition, available at all times to perform essential work of which it is capable, is far more advisable."

The New York Motorist, publication of the Automobile Club of New York, warns that disuse is the greatest enemy of your car. Club officials suggest that you sell it rather than store it.

But if you can't use, can't sell, and must store your car, here are some AAA suggestions that will at least minimize deterioration:

Put the car in the best possible mechanical condition. Wash it thoroughly, wax all paint, chrome and nickel, and spray chassis and under-body with clean oil.

Thoroughly lubricate the car. Clean upholstery, floor mats and trunk lining and treat them with moth preventive.

Then store the car in a clean, dry building, preferbaly with a temperature of from 40 to 60 degrees. Buildings occupied by animals should not be used, and the cold and dampness resulting from unheated buildings may cause wooden parts to warp. On the other hand, if the building is steam-heated, it's a good idea to place a pan of water in the car to prevent the wood from drying out.

Unless gasoline is drained from the fuel system, it will form gum, varnish and wax deposits. Likewise drain the cooling system, removing hose connections. All rubber trim, hose, wiring, weather stripping and mats should be cleaned, dried and protected from light and circulating air.

No matter what precautions you take, your chances of preserving your battery for more than a year, are slim. However, you can prolong its life to some extent by removing it and having it recharged and serviced at least every two months.

The car should be blocked up, so as to take pressure off tires. Deflate tires and remove them—with tubes inside—to a cool, dark place where the temperature is between 40 and 80 degrees. Wrapping tires with heavy paper protects them from light, air and dust—all of which harm rubber.

Keep out wasps and other insects which often build nests in engines, by placing rags over all openings to the motor.

Fnally, check your insurance policy. While it is desirable to keep fire and theft insurance in effect, many companies will allow you to discontinue collision and accidents payments when the car is laid up.

Agriculture

By JOHN GROVER

Total U. S. farm production records were smashed to smithereens in 1942. It was the biggest farm year in history.

Thanks to ideal weather, a production program prepared well in advance, and the toil and sweat of U. S. farmers, bumper crops were the rule. It pulled the United Nations out of what could have been a dangerous hole.

Late in 1941, the Department of Agriculture, faced with lend-lease food needs, prepared estimated 1942 goals for U. S. farmers on a county-by-county basis. After Pearl Harbor, these high goals were revised upward.

The farmers came through. Their '42 output has been called equal to a major victory in the war.

The unprecedented goal of 22,197,000,000 pounds of beef, veal, pork, lamb and mutton was set. U. S. herdsmen marketed 22,187,000,000 pounds. They were asked for 2,800,000,000 dozen eggs. Total egg production was 4,400,000,000 dozen. Milk production jumped from 52,400,000,000 quarts in 1941 to 54,300,000,000.

Vegetable oil crops saved the situation when Jap successes closed the East Indies. Nine million acres of soybeans and 4,100,000 acres of peanuts, double previous acreage, replaced foreign oils.

For 1943 production goals for many products, such as eggs, have been increased. There's been some shift of crop emphasis to meet war needs. The farmers face the composite obstacle of labor shortages, fertilizer shortages and machinery shortages.

Farmers are asked to concentrate on essential foods next year, to cut out non-essentials like watermelons and cucumbers. Pork production goals are 10 per cent higher than the '42 record. An additional 200,000,000 meat chickens are on the 1943 schedule.

Military demands will make for short supplies of canned fruits and vegetables. Increases in acreage of such essentials as carrots, lima beans, snap beans and onions have been ordered. Vegetable oil crops are again scheduled for increased planting.

Some civilian shortages in dairy products are already evident. Rationing may be necessary. Fewer fats will be available to civilians. Bread grains are abundant. Analysts do not expect the nutritional level to fall below the U. S. 1935-36 average.

"The Department of Agriculture is doubtful that the 1942 record production can be matched in the face of known unfavorable factors in 1943, and hence is stressing production of vitally essential farm goods.

Labor

By JOHN GROVER

The first war year fused American labor into a production army, hitting the ball with less work disruption than in a decade.

Man-days lost through strikes in all industry in the first eight months of 1942 totaled only 3,156,077, roughly one-sixth of the days lost in the same period of 1941. All over the country, labor was keeping its no-strike pledge. Only .08 of one per cent of war production was lost through strikes.

Despite the inroads of military service, more people were at work in 1942 than at any time in U. S. history. Last complete figures (for October) put the total of gainfully employed at 52,400,000.

Unemployment dropped to 1,600,000, a recent record. In the year between October 30, 1941, and October 30, 1942, the number of employed women rose from 12,300,000 to 14,300,000.

Manpower became the No. 1 problem. Labor faced regimentation in 1943 as the demands of war industry and the military increased. Some indication of the trend was the order closing U. S. gold mines to force the miners into the copper diggings. Under newly-appointed Manpower Czar Paul V. McNutt a start was made at year-end toward gearing men and jobs more closely to the war effort.

The War Labor Board made several significant declarations of policy. Mandatory maintenance of membership, in return for a no-strike pledge, became a basic credo. The W.L.B. also cracked down on unions violating the no-strike pledge, in withholding maintenance of membership requirements.

Migration of labor to munitions centers increased. President Roosevelt asked $1,620,000,000 for housing projects to shelter an estimated 1,600,000 workers shifting to production areas.

Wages remained at high peaks. The 1942 return to wage earners was 70 per cent above the 1939 total.

The A.F.L. and C.I.O. came no closer to healing their schism. Privately, leaders in both camps said there was little hope of an accord. John L. Lewis in a bitter speech read Phil Murray, C.I.O. president, out of the United Mine Workers and then led the UMW out of C.I.O.

Lewis lost prestige politically. In Kentucky, Representative Andrew J. May was elected despite his opposition. The West Virginia political machine that depended on the U.M.W. was soundly walloped.

Restrictive labor legislation was effectively blocked by administration stalwarts in the Senate. It still smouldered, and no analyst would risk a guess what augmented conservative elements in the '43 Congress would do.

Jail Overstays Hospitality

Tampa, Fla. (AP)—Police were puzzled about the prisoner in the city jail. They took him to the detective bureau but nobody there knew anything about him. He wasn't listed on the docket, the detention book or the "sleeper book." He was just there. The youthful "guest" finally explained he was passing through Tampa on his way to join the marines and someone told him he could sleep in the jail. There was a mixup and he wasn't able to get out the next morning or the next. The officers finally opened the doors and sent him on his way with their best wishes.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

Still a Man's Army

Daytona Beach, Fla.—Recruits coming into the Second W.A.A.C. Training Center here master with comparative ease many of their tasks but most of them come a cropper on a masculine item of their attire.

"The hardest thing they have to learn is to tie a four-in-hand tie," explained First Lieut. Charles L. Sims, in charge of the processing department where the girls are outfitted.

A G.I. four-in-hand tie is a "must" on a W.A.A.C. uniform.

Unscheduled Delivery

San Francisco—It was just like stealing Santa's sleigh and reindeer—

Mailman Russ Barnecut delivered a Christmas package. When he returned to the street, his mail truck and its load of 100 undelivered packages were gone.

High-Priced Celebration

Kansas City—Christmas bells rang in a lot of Yuletide spirit and rang out $190 for William H. Flaherty.

Flaherty told police he helped two slacks-clad young women celebrate the holiday—and after they left he missed $90 in cash and $100 in travelers' checks.

Not Too Merry

Chicago—The robber who took $231 from Julius Prumt at the point of a gun tried to ease the blow a little, at least.

"Merry Christmas," the gunman shouted as he fled.

Bright Light Notice

Rochelle, Ill.—It was a bright, light Christmas for residents of Rochelle and the village of Creston.

As a Christmas present from the city, more than 2,000 users of electricity here and in Creston will receive their December bills marked paid.

Rise Erases Threat Of Fluid Milk Shortage

Dairy handlers of the six states of the New York milkshed have been informed that the danger of a fluid milk shortage has now ended and that, with the seasonal rise in production, they no longer need to estimate and report each week the quantity of milk they will receive and the uses to which it will be put.

The information was contained in a letter from C. J. Blanford, administrator of the New York metropolitan milk marketing area, who requested handlers to file weekly forecasts at his office six weeks ago.

The text of the administrator's letter follows:

"To All Handlers:

"Your splendid cooperation in the past six weeks has enabled us to keep a continuous record of the supply of milk in the New York milkshed at a time when that supply apparently was in danger of running short of extraordinary demands for milk and milk products. That danger, however, does not exist at present.

"We are now in the season of rising production. Every indication points to a daily December supply in our milkshed that is three to four per cent larger than the November volume. Production, moreover, will climb without interruption until it reaches the seasonal peak in May and June.

"The volume of New York-area approved milk, in consequence, is sufficiently large now to provide ample fluid milk for the New York market and to assure a larger production of dairy products. The demand of other seaboard markets continues, it is true, to be sizeable, but it is levelling off well within our capacity to supply them with fluid milk and cream. We can expect this demand, moreover, to diminish somewhat in future months as the season of high production advances.

"Your weekly estimates of receipts and utilization of milk made it possible for us to direct buyers to available supplies. Our records, as a result, indicate that there was at no time a shortage of fluid milk. Some dairy handlers, to be sure, may have found the margin between supply and demand uncomfortably narrow.

"As that situation no longer exists and is unlikely to reappear for many months to come, if at all, the need for weekly forecasts of milk production and utilization has ended. Forms for reporting those forecasts, therefore, will not be supplied until such time as changes in demand or supply, or a combination of those factors, warrant us asking your cooperation a second time."

War Affords Youth Chance for Victory Work

New York, Dec. 26 (AP)—The war affords an opportunity for boys and girls to work for victory but does not justify scrapping their education for the duration, the national child labor committee says.

In its annual report for the year ending September 30, released yesterday by Courtenay Dinwiddie, general secretary, the committee warned against a wholesale relaxing of rules governing the employment of children.

Conceding that there is a need for juvenile aid in agriculture, the committee said this could be met without exposing children "to conditions that will seriously injure their usefulness to their country and themselves."

The war, the committee declared, "calls for great sacrifices, but not for the abandonment of reason and judgment."

All cereal consumption in Turkey has been placed under government control.

Life in Kingston For Johnny Newcomer

New York, Dec. 23 (Special)—An average child, born at the present time to average Kingston parents, would find upon investigation that, war or no war, his future is carefully mapped out for him.

Johnny Newcomer, the typical new arrival, will discover first that he has a 27½-year-old mother and a 32-year-old father. Then he will find that he is one of a crop of about 480 new babies due in his city in the next 12 months, according to United States birth rate predictions.

He will have the usual children's illnesses—measles, colic and the like—which he will take in his stride. School days will begin when he is six years old. He will get a good educational background, for, being an average Kingston child, he will complete 8.4 years of school.

The time will come for him to earn a livelihood, and, looking about him, he will glow with satisfaction at the possibilities. For the city in which he lives is not just an average community. It is a thriving one with a high standard of living, where the typical family in 1941 had an income of $2,773, compared with the $2,272 average national incomes, a condition since improved.

Johnny will marry and have, statistically, 1.5 children, for Kingston families average 3.5 people. He will live to the age of 63, whereas his father, who was born in 1910, had a life expectancy of only 52 years.

Gliders are generally of wood frame construction.

Education

By MARGARET KERNODLE

U. S. education faces the fighting world at the end of 1942 ready to push reading, writing and 'rithmetic slightly to one side in favor of military might. Officials are considering a combination of the last year of high school with the first year of college.

Taking inventory, education authorities found that one-third of the college students in this country are 19 and 19-year-old boys and that college enrollment already has dropped 14 per cent. Enrollment has fallen off as much as 21 per cent in some teacher training schools, and the Office of Education is surveying the teacher shortage.

Colleges show a trend to accelerate their programs by giving up vacation to increase the year from 36 to 48 weeks. More than 2,000 high schools have started Victory Corps. Victory Garden plans laid the foundation for sending high school students to the aid of farmers in 1943.

Congress voted funds for two national war education programs: $5,000,000 for student loans, and $17,500,000 for special war vocation training. Funds were reserved by 279 colleges for 21,000 students at an average of $190 per student, 44 per cent for engineering, 21 per cent for medicine, 15 per cent for chemistry, nine per cent for dentists, 5½ per cent for pharmacists, four per cent for physicists and two per cent for veterinarians.

The vocation training fund for engineering, science, management or other wartime work was used by 199 colleges giving 5,149 courses for 12 to 16 weeks to 760,000 students.

Newest programs prepared by the War Department for distribution by the Office of Education in December were pre-induction courses for study in electricity needed for 150 army jobs, shopwork for 188 army jobs, machine instruction for 226 and radio for 35.

Plans to increase physical fitness in high school and college were started with manuals prepared by the Office of Education, which conducted institutes for educators in the Army service command areas.

To speed up teaching, the Office of Education produced 50 films and conducted a Tuesday radio program for the Victory Corps. The Wartime Commission recommended federal funds be alloted to supplement state and local funds to prevent teachers leaving their schools for better paying jobs.

Negro Must Be Integrated Into War Industries

"In order to build morale and to comply with the Civil Rights Laws of the state of New York, it is necessary that the Negro be integrated into war industries," Industrial Commissioner Frieda S. Miller declared yesterday at a press conference at which she announced the publication of an important new booklet on the subject.

The publication, entitled, "How Management Can Integrate Negroes in War Industries," is being issued next week by the State War Council's Committee on Discrimination in Employment of which Miss Miller is chairman.

In an introduction to the booklet, Miss Miller states, "America is engaged in an all-out war on the economic, psychological and war fronts. All must participate. Unless they do, we shall be in a tough spot.

"Negroes form 9.8 per cent of the population and 20 per cent of the relief rolls. It is incumbent upon us to employ this important part of the population. This has been validated by the President and our committee, and has already been confirmed by the practical experience of outstanding firms everywhere.

"This book has been prepared in order to give the industrial leaders of America who have not yet used all these Americans specific recommendations on how this can be done. They should read the index to see who, what, when, where and why."

Speaking on the plight of the Negro at her press conference, Miss Miller said, "The employment situation of the Negro in this state and in the nation is still extremely bitter. In New York city where Negroes form approximately 6.1 per cent of the population, they comprise 26 per cent of all unemployed persons. In Buffalo, where they are around 3 per cent of the population, they form approximately 20 per cent of those unemployed.

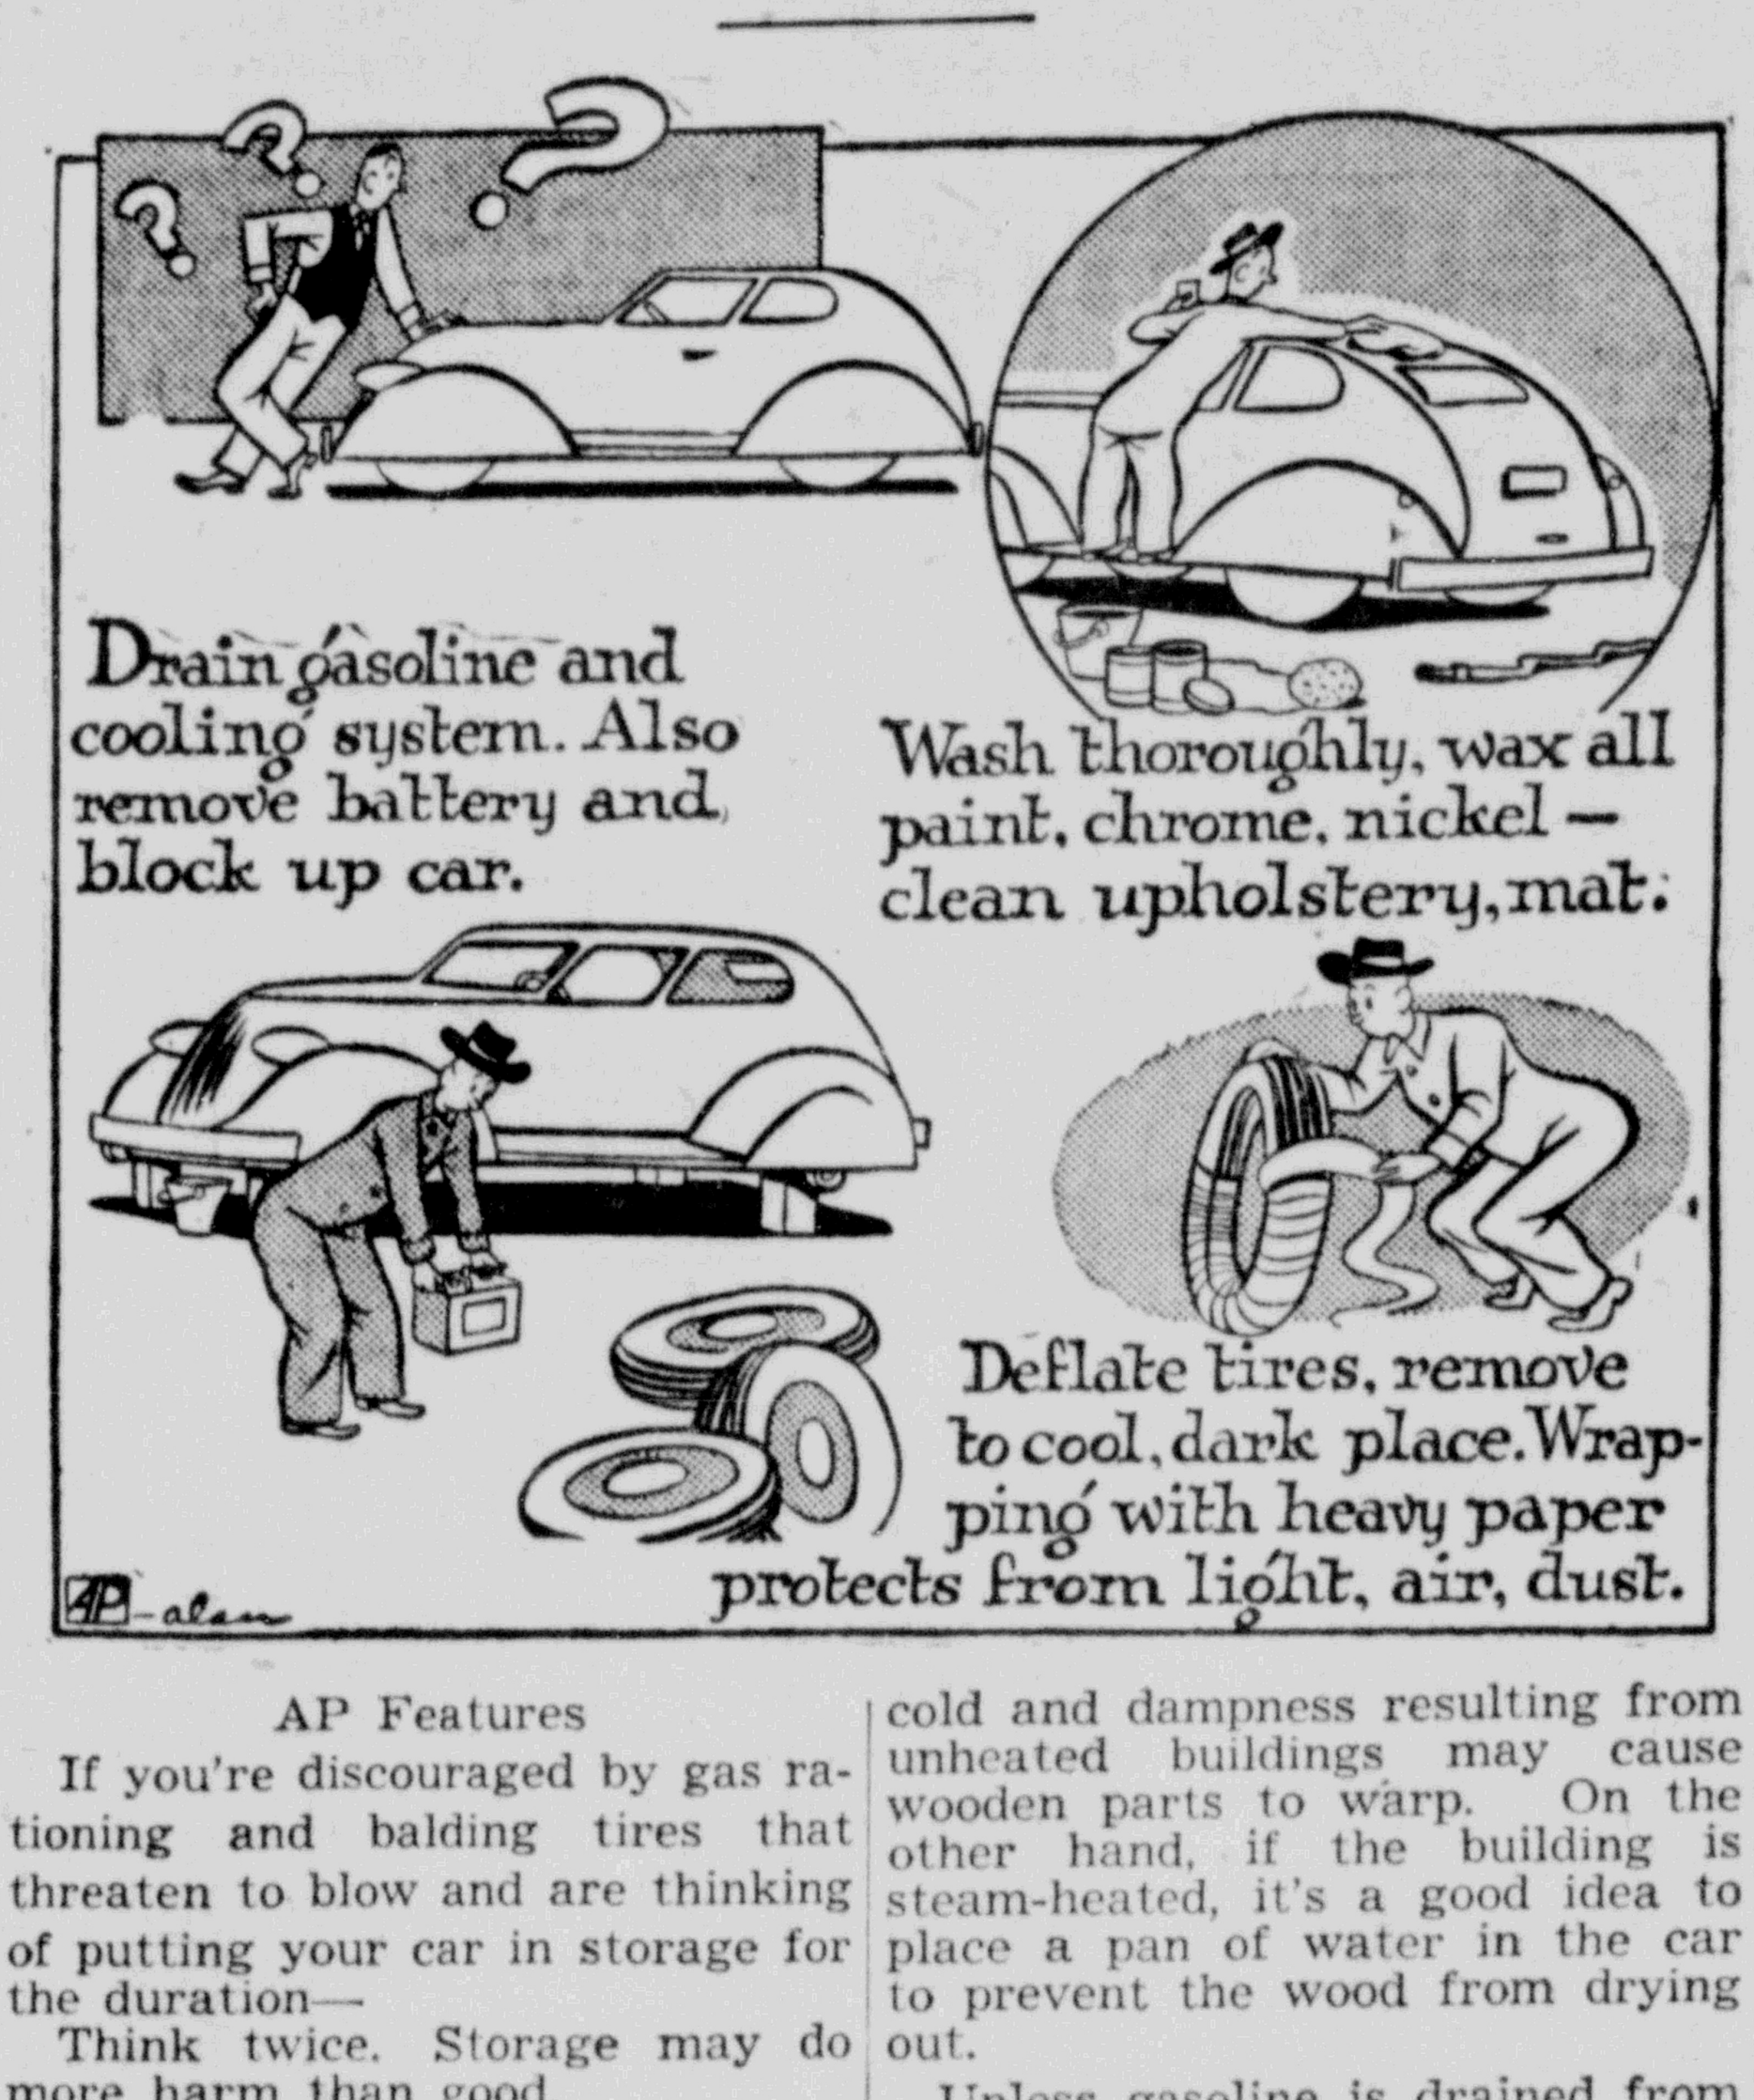
"Throughout the nation in the last year colored persons have comprised an increasing proportion of the unemployed because war workers have been drawn almost exclusively from the white labor force. It is now estimated that they constitute about 20 per cent of the unemployed, while they form only 9.8 per cent of the population.

"In 1941 in the state of New York more than 80 per cent of all Negro placements were in domestic and service occupations. Only about 1.3 per cent of all workers in war industries are colored and most of these are in unskilled jobs. The employment situation for the Negro, then, is thoroughly undesirable. It is especially dangerous during the present war, when we have taken our side against racial bigotry and where many of our allies are colored people.

"In upstate New York where a serious labor shortage is developing the Negro must be employed in order to produce to win the war. Elsewhere he must be employed because his present plight is dangerous to the morale of 9.8 per cent of our population and will be dangerous to the morale of approximately 9.8 per cent of our actual fighting force."

The booklet attempts to present concrete problems made by management in introducing Negroes into war industries and to offer practical methods for their successful integration.

Storage Can Harm Your Car, Say Experts; But if You Must Lay It Up, Here's How



Drain gasoline and cooling system. Also remove battery and block up car.
Wash thoroughly, wax all paint, chrome, nickel— clean upholstery, mat.
Deflate tires, remove to cool, dark place. Wrapping with heavy paper protects from light, air, dust.

AP Features

If you're discouraged by gas rationing and balding tires that threaten to blow and are thinking of putting your car in storage for the duration—

Think twice. Storage may do more harm than good.

That's the advice given by the car service department of the American Automobile Association. T. E. Allen, department mananger, insists furthermore that "placing your car in storage is not in itself a patriotic contribution to the war effort," and that "maintenance of your car in proper and efficient running condition, available at all times to perform essential work of which it is capable, is far more advisable."

The New York Motorist, publication of the Automobile Club of New York, warns that disuse is the greatest enemy of your car. Club officials suggest that you sell it rather than store it.

But if you can't use, can't sell, and must store your car, here are some AAA suggestions that will at least minimize deterioration:

Put the car in the best possible mechanical condition. Wash it thoroughly, wax all paint, chrome and nickel, and spray chassis and under-body with clean oil.

Thoroughly lubricate the car. Clean upholstery, floor mats and trunk lining and treat them with moth preventive.

Then store the car in a clean, dry building, preferbaly with a temperature of from 40 to 60 degrees. Buildings occupied by animals should not be used, and the cold and dampness resulting from unheated buildings may cause wooden parts to warp. On the other hand, if the building is steam-heated, it's a good idea to place a pan of water in the car to prevent the wood from drying out.

Unless gasoline is drained from the fuel system, it will form gum, varnish and wax deposits. Likewise drain the cooling system, removing hose connections. All rubber trim, hose, wiring, weather stripping and mats should be cleaned, dried and protected from light and circulating air.

No matter what precautions you take, your chances of preserving your battery for more than a year, are slim. However, you can prolong its life to some extent by removing it and having it recharged and serviced at least every two months.

The car should be blocked up, so as to take pressure off tires. Deflate tires and remove them—with tubes inside—to a cool, dark place where the temperature is between 40 and 80 degrees. Wrapping tires with heavy paper protects them from light, air and dust—all of which harm rubber.

Keep out wasps and other insects which often build nests in engines, by placing rags over all openings to the motor.

Fnally, check your insurance policy. While it is desirable to keep fire and theft insurance in effect, many companies will allow you to discontinue collision and accidents payments when the car is laid up.

Agriculture

By JOHN GROVER

Total U. S. farm production records were smashed to smithereens in 1942. It was the biggest farm year in history.

Thanks to ideal weather, a production program prepared well in advance, and the toil and sweat of U. S. farmers, bumper crops were the rule. It pulled the United Nations out of what could have been a dangerous hole.

Late in 1941, the Department of Agriculture, faced with lend-lease food needs, prepared estimated 1942 goals for U. S. farmers on a county-by-county basis. After Pearl Harbor, these high goals were revised upward.

The farmers came through. Their '42 output has been called equal to a major victory in the war.

The unprecedented goal of 22,197,000,000 pounds of beef, veal, pork, lamb and mutton was set. U. S. herdsmen marketed 22,187,000,000 pounds. They were asked for 2,800,000,000 dozen eggs. Total egg production was 4,400,000,000 dozen. Milk production jumped from 52,400,000,000 quarts in 1941 to 54,300,000,000.

Vegetable oil crops saved the situation when Jap successes closed the East Indies. Nine million acres of soybeans and 4,100,000 acres of peanuts, double previous acreage, replaced foreign oils.

For 1943 production goals for many products, such as eggs, have been increased. There's been some shift of crop emphasis to meet war needs. The farmers face the composite obstacle of labor shortages, fertilizer shortages and machinery shortages.

Farmers are asked to concentrate on essential foods next year, to cut out non-essentials like watermelons and cucumbers. Pork production goals are 10 per cent higher than the '42 record. An additional 200,000,000 meat chickens are on the 1943 schedule.

Military demands will make for short supplies of canned fruits and vegetables. Increases in acreage of such essentials as carrots, lima beans, snap beans and onions have been ordered. Vegetable oil crops are again scheduled for increased planting.

Some civilian shortages in dairy products are already evident. Rationing may be necessary. Fewer fats will be available to civilians. Bread grains are abundant. Analysts do not expect the nutritional level to fall below the U. S. 1935-36 average.

The Department of Agriculture is doubtful that the 1942 record production can be matched in the face of known unfavorable factors in 1943, and hence is stressing production of vitally essential farm goods.

Labor

By JOHN GROVER

The first war year fused American labor into a production army, hitting the hall with less work disruption than in a decade.

Man-days lost through strikes in all industry in the first eight months of 1942 totaled only 3,156,077, roughly one-sixth of the days lost in the same period of 1941. All over the country, labor was keeping its no-strike pledge. Only .08 of one per cent of war production was lost through strikes.

Despite the inroads of military service, more people were at work in 1942 than at any time in U. S. history. Last complete figures (for October) put the total of gainfully employed at 52,400,000.

Unemployment dropped to 1,600,000, a recent record. In the year between October 30, 1941, and October 30, 1942, the number of employed women rose from 12,300,000 to 14,300,000.

Manpower became the No. 1 problem. Labor faced regimentation in 1943 as the demands of war industry and the military increased. Some indication of the trend was the order closing U. S. gold mines to force the miners into the copper diggings. Under newly-appointed Manpower Czar Paul V. McNutt a start was made at year-end toward gearing men and jobs more closely to the war effort.

The War Labor Board made several significant declarations of policy. Mandatory maintenance of membership, in return for a no-strike pledge, became a basic credo. The W.L.B. also cracked down on unions violating the no-strike pledge, in withholding maintenance of membership requirements.

Migration of labor to munitions centers increased. President Roosevelt asked $1,620,000,000 for housing projects to shelter an estimated 1,600,000 workers shifiting to production areas.

Wages remained at high peaks. The 1942 return to wage earners was 70 per cent above the 1939 total.

The A.F.L. and C.I.O. came no closer to healing their schism. Privately, leaders in both camps said there was little hope of an accord. John L. Lewis in a bitter speech read Phil Murray, C.I.O. president, out of the United Mine Workers and then led the UMW out of C.I.O.

Lewis lost prestige poltically. In Kentucky, Representative Andrew J. May was elected despite his opposition. The West Virginia political machine that depended on the U.M.W. was soundly walloped.

Restrictive labor legislation was effectively blocked by administration stalwarts in the Senate. It still smouldered, and no analyst would risk a guess what augmented conservative elements in the '43 Congress would do.

Jail Overstays Hospitality

Tampa, Fla. (AP)—Police were puzzled about the prisoner in the city jail. They took him to the detective bureau but nobody there knew anything about him. He wasn't listed on the docket, the detention book or the "sleeper book." He was just there. The youthful "guest" finally explained he was passing through Tampa on his way to join the marines and someone told him he could sleep in the jail. There was a mixup and he wasn't able to get out the next morning or the next. The officers finally opened the doors and sent him on his way with their best wishes.

Rise Erases Threat Of Fluid Milk Shortage

Dairy handlers of the six states of the New York milkshed have been informed that the danger of a fluid milk shortage has now ended and that, with the seasonal rise in production, they no longer need to estimate and report each week the quantity of milk they will receive and the uses to which it will be put.

The information was contained in a letter from C. J. Blanford, administrator of the New York metropolitan milk marketing area, who requested handlers to file weekly forecasts at his office six weeks ago.

The text of the administrator's letter follows:

"To All Handlers:

"Your splendid cooperation in the past six weeks has enabled us to keep a continuous record of the supply of milk in the New York milkshed at a time when that supply apparently was in danger of running short of extraordinary demands for milk and milk products. That danger, however, does not exist at present.

"We are now in the season of rising production. Every indication points to a daily December supply in our milkshed that is three to four per cent larger than the November volume. Production, moreover, will climb without interruption until it reaches the seasonal peak in May and June.

"The volume of New York-area approved milk, in consequence, is sufficiently large now to provide ample fluid milk for the New York market and to assure a larger production of dairy products. The demand of other seaboard markets continues, it is true, to be sizeable, but it is levelling off well within our capacity to supply them with fluid milk and cream. We can expect this demand, moreover, to diminish somewhat in future months as the season of high production advances.

"Your weekly estimates of receipts and utilization of milk made it possible for us to direct buyers to available supplies. Our records, as a result, indicate that there was at no time a shortage of fluid milk. Some dairy handlers, to be sure, may have found the margin between supply and demand uncomfortably narrow.

"As that situation no longer exists and is unlikely to reappear for many months to come, if at all, the need for weekly forecasts of milk production and utilization has ended. Forms for reporting those forecasts, therefore, will not be supplied until such time as changes in demand or supply, or a combination of those factors, warrant us asking your cooperation a second time."

War Affords Youth Chance for Victory Work

New York, Dec. 26 (AP)—The war affords an opportunity for boys and girls to work for victory but does not justify scrapping their education for the duration, the national child labor committee says.

In its annual report for the year ending September 30, released yesterday by Courtenay Dinwiddie, general secretary, the committee warned against a wholesale relaxing of rules governing the employment of children.

Conceding that there is a need for juvenile aid in agriculture, the committee said this could be met without exposing children "to conditions that will seriously injure their usefulness to their country and themselves."

The war, the committee declared, "calls for great sacrifices, but not for the abandonment of reason and judgment."

War Relief Drive To Come in March

The Ulster County Chapter, American Red Cross, usually has the annual membership drive in November. This year it was not held and many have inquired as to the reason for this deviation from regular policy.

Replying to these questions, local Red Cross officers stated that the annual drive was eliminated due to an expected drive during March, 1943, for the purpose of raising a large sum of money for war relief.

"We earnestly implore you to bear in mind this coming drive and to be prepared to contribute as generously as possible," stated a local official.

OFFICE CAT

TRADE MARK REG.

By Junius

If you have any trouble deciding what the other driver is going to do on the icy pavement these days, just console yourself with the thought that he probably doesn't know himself.

He was dug out of his wrecked car and carried to the doctor's office:

Doctor—I can't do anything for him. I'm a veterinary surgeon.

Patient—That's all right. I was a jackass to think I could do 50 miles an hour on those thin tires.

HARVESTS / / / "As ye sow, so shall ye also reap," says the Good Book / / / Despite this warning, many persons seem to believe that, after spending much of their lives sowing a crop of wild oats, they should reap harvest in their later years / / / .

Motorists—Hey, its fortunate for you this happened in front of a doctor's house.

Victim—Yes, but I'm the doctor.

There are more automobiles than locomotives, but this doesn't mean that the majority is always right.

Traffic Officer—Lady, don't you know this is a safety zone?

Lady Motorist—Surely, that's why I drove in.

YEAR-END THOUGHTS / / / "The average wife walks a mile in preparing a meal" . . . Unless the delicatessen is in the next block / / / "You are a conservative if you can remember way back when people said the "dime novel" would ruin the coming generation." . . . Well, didn't it? / / / "Achievement is the only standard by which the world measures you" . . . Yes, ambition is the standard of measurement used only by your closest friends / / / "Christians do not believe in a hereafter for either domestic or wild animals" . . . Yes, man is the only animal ornery enough to need a hell / / / "Anything in the way of a new idea seems propaganda to the ignorant" . . . It is propaganda when they use generalities for logic and fact.

Friend—How is your doctor son getting along with his practice?

Mother—Excellently—he is now occasionally able to tell a patient there is nothing wrong with him.

Sunshine

When clouds are gray, and winter
rains are falling all about.
They dampen things inside of us—
as much as things without.
Enthusiasm drops—ka-hump! And,
though we never know
Why this occurs, no one denies chill rains make spirits low.
But when the dark clouds separate, and sun beams through the blue.
Our spirits rise—new hopes are born; it seems life starts anew.
And just as surely as that sun
dispels vast miles of gloom,
Your smile can penetrate life's clouds—and light the darkest room.

—Lyla Myers.

Junior—Can I have any kind of sea food I like?

Mother—Yes, dear. What shall I order for you?

Junior—Salt-water taffy.

Cops Lose Handcuffs

Daytona Beach, Fla. (AP)—The patrolmen knew their prisoner, arrested for disorderly conduct, had a penchant for running away so they handcuffed him before putting him in the police car. Sure enough, while they were stopped to investigate a street argument, the prisoner dashed into the night.

Before another night had passed, in came their prisoner at the police station asking that the cuffs be removed. He had filed them down so deep he couldn't file any further without cutting his wrists. The cost of the handcuffs, $15, was included in his $35 fine.

Program to Spread Oil Meals and Grains

Ithaca, N. Y., Dec. 24—A threatened famine of high protein feed ingredients facing the record-breaking number of livestock on American farms has brought from Northeast college nutrition specialists and co-operative leaders a three-point program designed to spread the short supplies of oil meals, gluten and distillers' grains over more tons of such plentiful ingredients as corn, oats, and wheat.

The program, worked out at a meeting of 50 agricultural and educational leaders in Buffalo last week and announced today, calls for:

Cutting the average protein content of dairy feeds, chiefly by suspending production of 24 per cent feeds until the crisis is over.

Use of fewer formulas so that there are no duplicating feeds for any one purpose.

Help from W. P. B. in securing materials for maintenance of overworked processing and milling machinery.

Terming lack of processing facilities the "immediate bottleneck," J. A. McConnell, general manager of the Cooperative Grange League Federation, said that the production of by-products such as oil meals and distillers' dried grains, though generally the highest in history, is not sufficient to keep pace with the demand.

Professor L. C. Cunningham of Cornell said that January 1 will find on the nation's farms 160,000,000 grain-consuming animal units—roughly speaking that's the equivalent of 160,000,000 cows to feed and is more than a 20 per cent increase over the preceding 10-year average. Represented in this total, Professor Cunningham said, are 76,000,000 hogs, up 25,000,000 to 35,000,000 from previous years, and 76,000,000 cattle, an increase of 11,000,000 over five years ago.

Mr. Cunningham pointed out that despite record crop productions, the available feed supply per animal unit is slightly less than it was a year ago. A major contributing factor to the protein shortage has been the greater use of high vegetable protein ingredients in poultry feed to replace the even more scarce sources of animal protein such as meat scraps and fish meal.

Representatives of six state colleges, including Cornell, Pennsylvania, Rutgers, the U. S. Department of Agriculture, and the War Production Board attended the meeting along with representatives from the Grange League Federation and the following farm cooperatives: Southern States Cooperative, Richmond, Va.; Pennsylvania Farm Bureau Cooperative Association, Harrisburg; Ohio Farm Bureau Cooperative Association, Columbus; Eastern States Farmers Exchange, Springfield, Mass.

War Relief Drive To Come in March

The Ulster County Chapter, American Red Cross, usually has the annual membership drive in November. This year it was not held and many have inquired as to the reason for this deviation from regular policy.

Replying to these questions, local Red Cross officers stated that the annual drive was eliminated due to an expected drive during March, 1943, for the purpose of raising a large sum of money for war relief.

"We earnestly implore you to bear in mind this coming drive and to be prepared to contribute as generously as possible," stated a local official.

Solution to Thursday's Puzzle

OFFICE CAT

TRADE MARK REG.

By Junius

If you have any trouble deciding what the other driver is going to do on the icy pavement these days, just console yourself with the thought that he probably doesn't know himself.

He was dug out of his wrecked car and carried to the doctor's office:

Doctor—I can't do anything for him. I'm a veterinary surgeon.

Patient—That's all right. I was a jackass to think I could do 50 miles an hour on those thin tires.

HARVESTS / / / "As ye sow, so shall ye also reap," says the Good Book / / / Despite this warning, many persons seem to believe that, after spending much of their lives sowing a crop of wild oats, they should reap harvest in their later years / / /

Motorists—Hey, its fortunate for you this happened in front of a doctor's house.

Victim—Yes, but I'm the doctor.

There are more automobiles than locomotives, but this doesn't mean that the majority is always right.

Traffic Officer—Lady, don't you know this is a safety zone?

Lady Motorist—Surely, that's why I drove in.

YEAR-END THOUGHTS / / / "The average wife walks a mile in preparing a meal" . . . Unless the delicatessen is in the next block / / / "You are a conservative if you can remember way back when people said the "dime novel" would ruin the coming generation." . . . Well, didn't it? / / / "Achievement is the only standard by which the world measures you" . . . Yes, ambition is the standard of measurement used only by your closest friends / / / "Christians do not believe in a hereafter for either domestic or wild animals" . . . Yes, man is the only animal ornery enough to need a hell / / / "Anything in the way of a new idea seems propaganda to the ignorant" . . . It is propaganda when they use generalities for logic and fact.

Friend—How is your doctor son getting along with his practice?

Mother—Excellently—he is now occasionally able to tell a patient there is nothing wrong with him.

Sunshine

When clouds are gray, and winter
  rains are falling all about,
They dampen things inside of us—
  as much as things without.
Enthusiasm drops—ka-bump! And,
  though we never know
Why this occurs, no one denies chill rains make spirits low.
But when the dark clouds separate, and sun beams through the blue,
Our spirits rise—new hopes are
  born; it seems life starts anew.
And just as surely as that sun
  dispels vast miles of gloom,
Your smile can penetrate life's clouds—and light the darkest room.

—Lyla Myers.

Junior—Can I have any kind of sea food I like?

Mother—Yes, dear. What shall I order for you?

Junior—Salt-water taffy.

Cops Lose Handcuffs

Daytona Beach, Fla. (AP)—The patrolmen knew their prisoner, arrested for disorderly conduct, had a penchant for running away so they handcuffed him before putting him in the police car. Sure enough, while they were stopped to investigate a street argument, the prisoner dashed into the night.

Before another night had passed, in came their prisoner at the police station asking that the cuffs be removed. He had filed them down so deep he couldn't file any further without cutting his wrists. The cost of the handcuffs, $15, was included in his $35 fine.

Program to Spread Oil Meals and Grains

Ithaca, N. Y., Dec. 24—A threatened famine of high protein feed ingredients facing the record-breaking number of livestock on American farms has brought from Northeast college nutrition specialists and co-operative leaders a three-point program designed to spread the short supplies of oil meals, gluten and distillers' grains over more tons of such plentiful ingredients as corn, oats, and wheat.

The program, worked out at a meeting of 50 agricultural and educational leaders in Buffalo last week and announced today, calls for:

Cutting the average protein content of dairy feeds, chiefly by suspending production of 24 per cent feeds until the crisis is over.

Use of fewer formulas so that there are no duplicating feeds for any one purpose.

Help from W. P. B. in securing materials for maintenance of overworked processing and milling machinery.

Terming lack of processing facilities the "immediate bottleneck," J. A. McConnell, general manager of the Cooperative Grange League Federation, said that the production of by-products such as oil meals and distillers' dried grains, though generally the highest in history, is not sufficient to keep pace with the demand.

Professor L. C. Cunningham of Cornell said that January 1 will find on the nation's farms 160,000,000 grain-consuming animal units—roughly speaking that's the equivalent of 160,000,000 cows to feed and is more than a 20 per cent increase over the preceding 10-year average. Represented in this total, Professor Cunningham said, are 76,000,000 hogs, up 25,000,000 to 35,000,000 from previous years, and 76,000,000 cattle, an increase of 11,000,000 over five years ago.

Mr. Cunningham pointed out that despite record crop productions, the available feed supply per animal unit is slightly less than it was a year ago. A major contributing factor to the protein shortage has been the greater use of high vegetable protein ingredients in poultry feed to replace the even more scarce sources of animal protein such as meat scraps and fish meal.

Representatives of six state colleges, including Cornell, Pennsylvania, Rutgers, the U. S. Department of Agriculture, and the War Production Board attended the meeting along with representatives from the Grange League Federation and the following farm cooperatives: Southern States Cooperative, Richmond, Va.; Pennsylvania Farm Bureau Cooperative Association, Harrisburg; Ohio Farm Bureau Cooperative Association, Columbus; Eastern States Farmers Exchange, Springfield, Mass.

Mr. Wiese received the degree of bachelor of electrical engineering.

Vassar College Grads Are in War Work

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Dec. 26 (AP)—Vassar College — traditionally famous for its daisy chain—has sent nearly half its 1942 graduates into paid and volunteer work, most of it connected with the war.

The number in paid positions is three times as large as the 1941 class record for the first six months after leaving school, twice as many of this year's class are married and 50 per cent more have gone directly into teaching in nursery, elementary and secondary schools, the Vassar Vocational Bureau disclosed today.

To a bureau questionnaire asking if the graduate is interested in finding suitable work, many replied "I have it!" A girl working 60 hours a week as a junior inspector of final assembly on light bombers added:

"I feel that I am privileged to see two things so clearly; how we fight, and what we are fighting for."

Eight of 1942's 260 graduates are in the W.A.V.E.S., Navy Auxiliary for Women, the bureau reported. Others are civilian employes of the Great Lakes Naval Training Station as junior engineers, chemists and clerks, more are with the Air Transport Command, military intelligence and navy research, and one, a British subject, is in the imperial censorship office at Port of Spain, Trinidad.

Fifteen are in war plants as office, laboratory or factory workers, 29 in newspaper or magazine offices, retail stores and banks. Of the 39 brides and 11 girls engaged to be married, 20 are working, and only 29 in the class have no definite plans.

Vassar College Grads Are in War Work

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Dec. 26 (AP)—Vassar College — traditionally famous for its daisy chain—has sent nearly half its 1942 graduates into paid and volunteer work, most of it connected with the war.

The number in paid positions is three times as large as the 1941 class record for the first six months after leaving school, twice as many of this year's class are married and 50 per cent more have gone directly into teaching in nursery, elementary and secondary schools, the Vassar Vocational Bureau disclosed today.

To a bureau questionnaire asking if the graduate is interested in finding suitable work, many replied "I have it!" A girl working 60 hours a week as a junior inspector of final assembly on light bombers added:

"I feel that I am privileged to see two things so clearly; how we fight, and what we are fighting for."

Eight of 1942's 260 graduates are in the W.A.V.E.S., Navy Auxiliary for Women, the bureau reported. Others are civilian employes of the Great Lakes Naval Training Station as junior engineers, chemists and clerks, more are with the Air Transport Command, military intelligence and navy research, and one, a British subject, is in the imperial censorship office at Port of Spain, Trinidad.

Fifteen are in war plants as office, laboratory or factory workers, 29 in newspaper or magazine offices, retail stores and banks. Of the 39 brides and 11 girls engaged to be married, 20 are working, and only 29 in the class have no definite plans.

body and endurance relies on heart and lung capacity."

After men pass 25 they usually turn to sports which have a greater recreational and social value, in the opinion of Leon Kranz, director of physical education at Northwestern University. Up to 25, he said, men are interested in sports which require training.

Kranz believes that it's training that counts," and said that although men have maintained well trained bodies "far past the draft age they have not done so from a swivel chair. The reason men degenerate so fast after 25 is because they give up the activities that keep their bodies conditioned."

Dr. Arno S. Luckhardt, University of Chicago professor of physiology, said the age at which a man "fades" physically depends upon when he stops exercising.

Christmas in City Observed Quietly

Many Church Services Are Held on Christmas Eve; Cheer Group Helps 700

Kingston's first war time Christmas in a quarter of a century was quietly observed on Friday, and the advent of the Christmas season was marked with sadness for virtually every home had a vacant chair, although some homes were brightened by the appearance at the Christmas dinner of the boys in their uniforms home on a brief leave of absence.

Christmas Eve was welcomed in the city by services in many of the churches, and all of the services were thronged with worshippers and mingling with the Christmas music were the prayers for peace and an end to the war.

While the birthday of the Christ Child was marked by sorrow in many homes the children of the city, too young to realize the grimness of the world, were happily celebrating the advent as they played with their toys.

Due to the work of the Community Christmas Cheer Committee, assisted by the donations of many citizens of the city, fully 700 children were remembered with gifts on Christmas Day, and as far as is known, no child in the city was overlooked by Santa Claus.

Christmas in 1941 was marked by temperatures ranging from 31 to 48, and Christmas Day this year the temperatures ranged from 35 to 45 degrees above zero, while on Thursday the temperatures ranged from 34 to 43 degrees, as compared with readings of 43 to 58 the day before Christmas in 1941.

This morning much colder weather swept down on the city. It rode the wings of a biting wind that whirled through the streets, driving the mercury down to a low of 30 degrees at 8 o'clock this morning.

Holiday traffic on the buses and trains was very heavy on the day before Christmas, but Christmas Day traffic was light, it was reported. It was stated that those using the buses and trains were about equally divided in number between the men in the armed service and civilians going home for the holiday season.

The Kingston fire department observed Christmas Day by responding to a call for a fire in the home of Harry Van Wagenen at 198 Tremper avenue at 10:57 o'clock last night. The fire was caused by an electric iron which was left plugged in. The iron became overheated and fire followed.

With gas rationing in force, auto traffic through the city was extremely light for the holiday season, it was stated today by Chief of Police Phinney. Thursday the traffic was much heavier, but it was not as heavy as the day before Christmas last year.

Heavy Yule Travel Fails to Materialize

The anticipated heavy traffic over the Christmas holiday season did not materialize in Kingston and while transportation lines had a good holiday business there was no big rush. An appeal to the civilian traveler to stay home over the holidays apparently had its effect.

Thursday afternoon and evening the West Shore railroad had a moderate rush with much of the traffic being civilians en route home with some service men traveling. Christmas day traffic was light and travelers had no difficulty in securing accommodations. Bus lines reported traffic moderate. Through trains on the New York Central line had a fairly heavy traffic and extra coaches were provided where necessary.

Many of the service men home on furlough were given passes ahead of the holiday to relieve the Christmas rush and the passes were issued so as to stagger the number of men away from camps on Christmas and over New Years.

Nigeria is shipping thousands of tons of yams to military camps.

PORT EWEN

E. groups will not have 7 o'clock meetings since they assist in the evening service. The special Christmas offering for the "War Emergency Fund" may be presented on the plates at any of these services. The congregation is reminded to try to complete the 1942 account as this Sunday is the last of the year. Pledge cards for the year 1943 are to be returned; they also may be put on the offering plates. The weekly offering envelopes are ready for distribution and may be secured in the church vestibule from the treasurer, C. Freer.

Church of the Presentation, the Rev. Michael J. Curley, C.Ss.R., pastor.—Masses at 8 and 10:30 a. m. There will be no Sunday school session. The Presentation Women's Club and all women of the parish will receive communion at the 8 o'clock Mass.

At the Christman entertainment by the Sunday school of the Methodist Church Tuesday evening the Rev. and Mrs. F. W. Coutant received a purse of $123, given by members and friends of the congregation. The Rev. and Mrs. Coutant wish to express their appreciation to all who contributed.

Mrs. Miriam Gillette Pecon of Valley Stream, L. I., is spending the holidays with her mother, Mrs. J. U. Gillette.

Reminder of Defeat

London, Dec. 26 (AP)—"Colonel" Britton, the BBC broadcaster who led the "V" sign campaign which nettled the Germans for months, advocates now the use of the symbol "1918" to taunt the Nazis. Britton urged his listeners in German-occupied countries last night to chalk up the figures on walls, saying they would be a "reminder to the Germans of their tradition of defeat."

War Workers Are Back at All Jobs

Christmas Is Observed in Traditional Fashion

(By The Associated Press)

Their first real holiday of 1942 over, Americans returned to work today after observing a Christmas in traditional fashion, with the day of peace and worship outlined against the grimness of distant war fronts where there was no lull in fighting.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt, with their four sons away at war, attended services at a nearby church with few members of the family and a small group of friends. Earlier, an army band and a group of carolers entertained them on the White House lawn.

Across the country, war production workers took a holiday to herald the season of "Peace on Earth," and then went back to turning out arms and munitions to speed the day of victory and peace.

At most battle points around the war-torn globe, the struggle went on, but in the British Isles, American fighting men observed Christmas at public gatherings with English and Irish children and around the family tables in private homes.

They had a greeting from King George VI who said of the Yanks "We Welcome Them Into Our Homes." The King expressed the hope that their visit would be "the basis of enduring understanding between our two peoples."

First U. S. Nurses Arrive in Africa

Soldiers Help Them Shop for Clothes in Oran

By RUSSELL LANDSTROM

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Dec. 24 (delayed) (AP)—2nd Lieuts. Agnes Theresak, Tarrytown, and Della Mae Moore, Norwalk, Conn., were among the first contingent of United States nurses arriving here just before Christmas; still excited over their trip from Britain.

They tried to find something that looked like a beauty shop, and something that would remind them of Christmas back home. But in both instances they were disappointed.

Among the first questions asked the girls—all of them commissioned officers—was: "Are you still forbidden to get married?"

There was a swelling chorus of replies: "No."

The nurses finally managed to get a wan, little Christmas tree for themselves, and they agreed that: "We like this country well enough, but wish it were a bit more Christmasy."

The nurses stopped first in Oran. American soldiers there went shopping for them, trying to buy stockings, slips and such things. They dug into their own barrack bags for equipment the girls lacked or had lost en route.

The girls are all graduate nurses and now members, and proudly, of the Army Nurses Corps. They are settling down to their preliminary work in a military hospital which will have a minimum of 250 beds. Meanwhile, they are subject to training discipline not unlike that of the soldiers, but they are taking it in stride.

body and endurance relies on heart and lung capacity."

After men pass 25 they usually turn to sports which have a greater recreational and social value, in the opinion of Leon Kranz, director of physical education at Northwestern University. Up to 25, he said, men are interested in sports which require training.

Kranz believes that it's training that counts," and said that although men have maintained well trained bodies "far past the draft age they have not done so from a swivel chair. The reason men degenerate so fast after 25 is because they give up the activities that keep their bodies conditioned."

Dr. Arno S. Luckhardt, University of Chicago professor of physiology, said the age at which a man "fades" physically depends upon when he stops exercising.

Christmas in City Observed Quietly

Many Church Services Are Held on Christmas Eve; Cheer Group Helps 700

Kingston's first war time Christmas in a quarter of a century was quietly observed on Friday, and the advent of the Christmas season was marked with sadness for virtually every home had a vacant chair, although some homes were brightened by the appearance at the Christmas dinner of the boys in their uniforms home on a brief leave of absence.

Christmas Eve was welcomed in the city by services in many of the churches, and all of the services were thronged with worshippers and mingling with the Christmas music were the prayers for peace and an end to the war.

While the birthday of the Christ Child was marked by sorrow in many homes the children of the city, too young to realize the grimness of the world, were happily celebrating the advent as they played with their toys.

Due to the work of the Community Christmas Cheer Committee, assisted by the donations of many citizens of the city, fully 700 children were remembered with gifts on Christmas Day, and as far as is known, no child in the city was overlooked by Santa Claus.

Christmas in 1941 was marked by temperatures ranging from 31 to 48, and Christmas Day this year the temperatures ranged from 35 to 45 degrees above zero, while on Thursday the temperatures ranged from 34 to 43 degrees, as compared with readings of 43 to 58 the day before Christmas in 1941.

This morning much colder weather swept down on the city. It rode the wings of a biting wind that whirled through the streets, driving the mercury down to a low of 30 degrees at 8 o'clock this morning.

Holiday traffic on the buses and trains was very heavy on the day before Christmas, but Christmas Day traffic was light, it was reported. It was stated that those using the buses and trains were about equally divided in number between the men in the armed service and civilians going home for the holiday season.

The Kingston fire department observed Christmas Day by responding to a call for a fire in the home of Harry Van Wagenen at 198 Tremper avenue at 10:57 o'clock last night. The fire was caused by an electric iron which was left plugged in. The iron became overheated and fire followed.

With gas rationing in force, auto traffic through the city was extremely light for the holiday season, it was stated today by Chief of Police Phinney. Thursday the traffic was much heavier, but it was not as heavy as the day before Christmas last year.

Heavy Yule Travel Fails to Materialize

The anticipated heavy traffic over the Christmas holiday season did not materialize in Kingston and while transportation lines had a good holiday business there was no big rush. An appeal to the civilian traveler to stay home over the holidays apparently had its effect.

Thursday afternoon and evening the West Shore railroad had a moderate rush with much of the traffic being civilians en route home with some service men traveling. Christmas day traffic was light and travelers had no difficulty in securing accommodations. Bus lines reported traffic moderate. Through trains on the New York Central line had a fairly heavy traffic and extra coaches were provided where necessary.

Many of the service men home on furlough were given passes ahead of the holiday to relieve the Christmas rush and the passes were issued so as to stagger the number of men away from camps on Christmas and over New Years.

Reminder of Defeat

London, Dec. 26 (AP)—"Colonel" Britton, the BBC broadcaster who led the "V" sign campaign which nettled the Germans for months, advocates now the use of the symbol "1918" to taunt the Nazis. Britton urged his listeners in German-occupied countries last night to chalk up the figures on walls, saying they would be a "reminder to the Germans of their tradition of defeat."

War Workers Are Back at All Jobs

(By The Associated Press)

Their first real holiday of 1942 over, Americans returned to work today after observing a Christmas in traditional fashion, with the day of peace and worship outlined against the grimness of distant war fronts where there was no lull in fighting.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt, with their four sons away at war, attended services at a nearby church with few members of the family and a small group of friends. Earlier, an army band and a group of carolers entertained them on the White House lawn.

Across the country, war production workers took a holiday to herald the season of "Peace on Earth," and then went back to turning out arms and munitions to speed the day of victory and peace.

At most battle points around the war-torn globe, the struggle went on, but in the British Isles, American fighting men observed Christmas at public gatherings with English and Irish children and around the family tables in private homes.

They had a greeting from King George VI who said of the Yanks "We Welcome Them Into Our Homes." The King expressed the hope that their visit would be "the basis of enduring understanding between our two peoples."

First U. S. Nurses Arrive in Africa

By RUSSELL LANDSTROM

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Dec. 24 (delayed) (AP)—2nd Lieuts. Agnes Theresak, Tarrytown, and Della Mae Moore, Norwalk, Conn., were among the first contingent of United States nurses arriving here just before Christmas, still excited over their trip from Britain.

They tried to find something that looked like a beauty shop, and something that would remind them of Christmas back home. But in both instances they were disappointed.

Among the first questions asked the girls—all of them commissioned officers—was: "Are you still forbidden to get married?"

There was a swelling chorus of replies: "No."

The nurses finally managed to get a wan, little Christmas tree for themselves, and they agreed that: "We like this country well enough, but wish it were a bit more Christmasy."

The nurses stopped first in Oran. American soldiers there went shopping for them, trying to buy stockings, slips and such things. They dug into their own barrack bags for equipment the girls lacked or had lost en route.

The girls are all graduate nurses and now members, and proudly, of the Army Nurses Corps. They are settling down to their preliminary work in a military hospital which will have a minimum of 250 beds. Meanwhile, they are subject to training discipline not unlike that of the soldiers, but they are taking it in stride.

Nation's Boxing Prospects Seen As 'Gloomy' Today

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR

New York, Dec. 26 (AP)—With more than 2,000 fisticuffers now doing their fighting for Uncle Sam, the nation's boxing prospects for the coming year were described as "gloomy" today by Ring Magazine, which named undefeated Ray Robinson as its "boxer of the year."

In announcing its copyrighted ring rankings for 1942, the magazine presented a review of the fistic year which saw "50 per cent of America's fight clubs" go out of business because of the war.

"The year was marked by a complete shut-down of boxing in 11 states," the publication declared in a copyrighted article accompanying its 18th annual rankings of the leaders in the eight weight divisions. "Competition was curtailed everywhere; in many sports it had to be abandoned. x x x and the prospect looks gloomy for 1943."

On the brighter side, the magazine pointed out that general gate increases were noted in Cleveland, Baltimore and Philadelphia over the previous year and that New York's Madison Square Garden drew 315,381 fans for 28 fight shows during 1942. The Garden shows brought a gross gate of $1,111,202, or an average of around $4,000 per show over 1941.

The list of professional and amateur fighters now in the armed forces includes 23 past world champions and four present titleholders, the magazine said.

In addition to picking the New York welterweight as its fighter of the year, the magazine announced a special award to Corporal Barney Ross of the Marines, former holder of three world titles, as "boxing's most valuable man" for his heroic fighting on Guadalcanal.

Here are the men rated by Ring as the best in their respective divisions, selected after a survey of the records of 2,100 scrappers in the United States, Canada, England, Australia and Central and South America:

Heavyweight—Joe Louis, Detroit.

Light heavyweight—Jimmy Bivins, Cleveland.

Middleweight—Tony Zale, Chicago.

Welterweight — Ray Robinson, New York.

Lightweight — Sammy Angott, Washington, Pa.

Featherweight — Willie Pep, Hartford, Conn.

Bantamweight — Manuel Ortiz, Los Angeles.

Flyweight—Peter Kane, England.

Only Louis, Zale, Pep and Ortiz are recognized as world champions by one or more of boxing's ruling bodies. Louis, Light Heavyweight Champion Gus Lesnevich, Middleweight Champion Tony Zale and Welterweight Champion Freddie Cochrane are in the armed forces.

Bivins was placed ahead of Lesnevich because he defeated him. Robinson topped the welterweights because he won all 14 of his starts during the year, nine of them by knockouts.

Although Angott has retired as lightweight champion, the magazine gave him the top spot among the 135-pounders because his retirement came late in the year.

Annual College Sports Carnival at Lake Placid

Lake Placid, N. Y., Dec. 26 (AP)—Skatse flash and pucks fly today as hockey teams from six schools launch Lake Placid's annual college week winter sports festival.

A single afternoon game and a night doubleheader set the stage for hockey and ski competition extending through January 2.

Initial participants are pucksters from Colgate, Middlebury, Cornell, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Hamilton and Williams.

Three games daily are scheduled Monday and Tuesday, with finals Tuesday night, and another college hockey tourney is set for December 31, January 1 and 2.

The annual Lake Placid Club invitation ski tournament will be conducted the latter two days, with Middlebury, unofficial winner last year, meeting slalom, downhill, cross-country and jumping entries from 10 schools.

Other competitors include New Hampshire, which scored 296.01 points to Middlebury's 296.14 before rain washed out last season's cross-country, plus Dartmouth, Colgate, Cornell, Harvard, Penn State, Princeton, Syracuse, St. Lawrence and Williams.

Monday and Tuesday also will see a field of 20 in action in the annual women's prep school and college ski tourney. Individual downhill and slalom contests are planned.

Schroeder, Betz Top Tennis Play

By DILLON GRAHAM
(AP) Features Sports Editor

New York—A talkative, two-fisted Ecuadorean, Francisco (Pancho) Segura, furnished most of the color tennis offered this year but a homebred smasher from California won the national singles championship.

Young Ted Schroeder of Glendale, Calif., whose reputation had largely been made in doubles, breezed through a singles field that had been denuded of many of its stars by military and professional calls, to whip Frankie Parker in the finals, 8-6; 7-5; 3-6; 4-6; 6-2.

The women's championship provided a surprise as Louise Brough, husky Beverly Hills, Calif., girl, who had won almost every major tournament of the summer, lost to Pauline Betz, last year's runner-up, from Winter Park, Fla. Miss Betz, trounced by her young rival several times in other tournaments, won 4-6; 6-1; 6-4.

Segura, a dark youngster, who bounded around the court for gets like Bitsy Grant, and hit his shots with a two-handed grip reminiscent of Australia's John Bromwich, jumped to the front by winning the Florida West Coast tourney in the spring.

A shot in the arm to tennis, after the loss of such standouts as Bobby Riggs, and Frank Kovacs, Segura pulled 'em in at the gate as he won six of his ten tournaments, including the Longwood and Eastern Clay courts singles.

In the semi-finals of the nationals, however, Frankie Parker's steady baseline game drove him crazy and he lost in straight sets.

With the caliber of the field below par, this shaped up as Parker's year. The one-time Milwaukee prodigy, a challenger and ranking star for a decade, appeared too steady and experienced for the others. And he had little trouble getting the finals but Schroeder's dynamic volleying attack cut him down.

After leading 4-2 in the first set and 5-2 in the second, Parker lost both sets before Schroder's fiery offense. Parker's accurate targetry and forcing shots in the last set, Frankie could not handle the inspired game Schroeder produced.

Miss Brough and Margaret Osborne of San Francisco beat Miss Betz and Doris Hart of Miami in doubles, 2-6; 7-5; 6-0 while Lt. Gardnar Mulloy, of Miami, and Billy Talbert of Cincinnati whipped Schroeder and Sidney Wood in the men's doubles, 9-7; 7-5; 6-1.

Schroeder also won the national intercollegiate singles, beating his teammate, Larry Dee of Stanford; Seymour Greenberg, Chicago southpaw, took the national clay courts crown, and Mrs. Patricia Todd of New York won the indoor singles. Don Budge, Oakland, Calif., won the professional championship beating Bobby Riggs of Chicago, 6-2; 6-2; 6-2.

Georgia's Squad Sees Hollywood

Next Ambition Is to Beat U.C.L.A. Bruins

Pasadena, Calif., Dec. 26 (AP)—Georgia's big squad of fine football specialists had two ambitions when it came west to southern California—

(a) To beat U.C.L.A.'s Bruins in the Rose Bowl New Year's Day.

(b) To look over the movie studios.

Well, it's too early to tell whether the boys will realize their primary goal, but the secondary one they reached today when the whole squad, 40-odd strong, went out to Hollywood for luncheon at a film studio (Paramount) and later spent an hour or two looking over the lot and its quota of lovelies, and getting an idea of how movies are made.

Frankie Sinkwich, the ace of the Georgia deck, got out of bed yesterday morning and hobbled about a bit on his two injured ankles. He didn't work out, however, and Butts declared it was doubtful if Frankie would be permitted to do any heavy work prior to game time New Year's Day. Butts wants to give Frankie's most recently injured ankle, his right one, plenty of chance to heal. Wally is very happy that Sinkwich has only two ankles to get hurt.

U.C.L.A.'s Bruins sent every member of the visiting squad a Christmas present yesterday, but, as one Los Angeles sports writer put it:

"They'll never get anything else from the Bruins without working for it."

All teams in the National Division which had there Thanksgiving games postponed are urged to arrange their games for next week.

Arrangements for the alleys may be made by calling the Y.M.C.A.

Miami Track Owners Have Chills and Fevers

Miami, Fla. Dec. 26 (AP)—A week of winter horse racing and the opening of a second greyhound track in this area have not cured owners and officials of alternate chills and fever over the prospects for a happy season.

The 7,144 Christmas Day crowd at Tropical Park exceeded the 5,111 of last Monday, the opening day, and the holiday throng poured $252,376 through the pari-mutuels windows, only $6,454 less than Christmas a year ago. The track needs a $150,000 daily handle to meet its overhead, an average that has barely been met this week.

Good attendance was expected today, the first Saturday of the new season, but officials, fevered by this reasonably good showing already are developing a chill over anticipation of what might be expected next week and thereafter. Many track hands, however, are mentioning January 1 as a magical date after which everything will be rosy, but their voices are none too confident upon recalling the slump between the inaugural and Yule cards.

Dog track men have a mild case of shakes over the question of what tonight's opening of the West Flagler Kennel Club will do to the less-than-a-thousand nightly attendance at the already-operating Hollywood oval. Two other Miami area dog tracks will open soon—the Miami Beach on January 1 and the Biscayne on January 6.

The Jai Alai Fronton opened last night, rounding out the parimutuels setup here a bit more. The first night was successful from standpoints of crowd and betting.

Johnny Adams, leading jockey of the year, boosted his wins to a total of 241 yesterday by scoring a triple, among them the mile and 70 yard Christmas handicap astride Mince-No. He equalled the track record of a minute, 41 and 1/5 seconds and paid $5.70 for two. Adams other victories were in the first and third races.

He is 19 wins ahead of Eric Guerin, a lead the runner-up has no mathematical chance of overcoming.

Anderson Pleased With His All-Stars

Philadelphia, Dec. 26 (AP) — Heartley "Hunk" Anderson was a completely satisfied individual today, as his National League All-Stars went into their last day of drills before their clash with the Washington Redskins in tomorrow's pro bowl classic at Shibe Park.

If morale could do it, his team was a cinch to walk off the field with victory—and in his case, revenge, Anderson was convinced. He and his assistant, Luke Johnsos, had completed a terrific task of drilling a mixed group of players in two systems of football in one short week, and the results, they said, were all they could ask for.

Ray Flaherty, coach of the Redskins, continued to worry about lack of enthusiasm on his squad. The champions went through a light drill yesterday, confining their practice to touch football.

Wee Willie Wilkin, the Redskins all-league tackle, reported for duty yesterday. He had been called home to California after the title game two weeks ago.

The All-Stars lost another player yesterday when Dr. W. W. Kelly, physician to Don Hutson, ordered the Green Bay kicking and pass-grabbing star to stay out of the game. The doctor said Hutson, injured November 22 in a game against the New York Giants, had a cold, severe cough and chest injury.

Milt Simington, Pittsburgh Steelers guard who was on the All-Stars first string line, suffered a heart attack Thursday and announced he would quit football for good.

Bowling Party at Emerick's Dec. 29

Funds Will Go Toward 'Buy a Bomber Fund'

Jack Martin, proprietor of Emerick's Recreation Alleys, has announced a gala holiday party which will be held at his establishment on Albany avenue Tuesday evening, December 29.

This novel affair promises to be one of the highlights in bowling this season. The bowlers which are expected to number over 100 men and women both professional and amateur will contribute to the "Buy a Bomber Fund."

Following the bowling, which will start at 8 o'clock, Mr. Martin will play host to the bowlers and all others present at a Yuletide party. An entertaining evening for everyone is assured and host Martin has issued a welcome to the bowling public of Kingston and vicinity to be his guests.

Fifth Annual Renewal Of Blue-Gray Classic

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 26 (AP)—Forty-four gridiron huskies, hailed as the pick of collegiate talent from opposite sides of the Mason-Dixon line, stood poised here today to do battle in the fifth annual renewal of the Blue-Gray classic.

Football fans in this section hopefully describe the game as the greatest battle since Appomattox, and appropriately enough, the teams were set to square-off here in the "cradle of the Confederacy."

Dedicated to the present solidarity of the nation the game was inaugurated five years ago and has gained in scope and popularity each year.

Both squads have undergone intensive training at the hands of picked coaches from their respective sections. Each team has won two games, making today's struggle the rubber game of the series.

Advance notices of line-ups were given out, but with such able performers on hand, any one of a number of conditions might bring a last minute change. All players are seniors.

Bill Vickroy of Ohio State, and Joe Muma of Virginia Military Institute, will meet in the center of the field as rival captains to decide the final pre-game arrangements.

Probable Line-ups:

North	Pos	South
Baumgartner (Minn.)	LE	Alford, (T.C.U.)
Hirsbrunner (Wisc.)	LT	Wood (Ky.)

Ted Schroeder Will Defend Tennis Title

New Orleans, Dec. 26 (AP)—Ted Schroeder, the nation's top ranking tennis player, defends his Sugar Bowl tennis title here today in the opening round of the annual week of midwinter sports.

The carnival of sports which leads up to the New Year's Day football climax between Tulsa and Tennessee usually is staged for thousands of visitors to New Orleans, but this transportation-taxed year service men and hometowners will form the bulk of the group.

Other sports on tap are a rowing race today between two service teams from the Eighth Naval District; an amateur boxing card Monday between New Orleans and Chicago teams; Stanford vs. Great Lakes Naval Training Station on the basketball court Wednesday and an invitational track meet Thursday. Only the sailing regatta is a war casualty.

Schroeder was seeded on top of the tennis tournament with Francisco Secura, the little native of Ecuador, right behind. Schroeder faced James Ebert of Illinois today while Segura tied up with Glen Gardner of New Orleans.

Third seeded William Talbert of Cincinnati met the promising youngster Jack Tuero of Memphis and fourth seeded Jack Kramer of California took on Tulane's Roy Bartlett.

Two Persons Are Injured When Taxicabs Collide

Two persons were injured at 3:15 o'clock this mornig when two taxicabs collided at the intesection of Foxhall and Hasbrouck avenues. According to the taxi drivers in their report to the police, the accident was due to the slippery condition of the intersection.

The two people injured, both passengers in the taxis, were: John Remus and Marjorie Dittus, both of 38 Shufeldt street. Their injuries were said to be not serious.

The taxicabs were operated by Robert Harvey of Bloomington and Irving H. Wilcox of Route 1, Kingston. Both cars were damaged.

Kieran Quits Times

New York, Dec. 26 (AP)—John Kieran, the noted sports columnist who answers questions on the "Information Please" radio program, has resigned from the staff of the New York Times and will write a daily column for the New York Sun, effective January 4. Kieran announced last night he had resigned from the Times, and said his new column for the Sun would appear five times a week and would be on general topics.

Eberstadt Knows How to Deliver

'Bottleneck Buster' Gives Decisions on All War Supply Requests

By FRANK I. WELLER

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—When "bottleneck buster" Eberstadt took a Washington war job, his anti-Roosevelt pals said, "Ferd, you're ruined."

"Okay, Okay," he snorted, "I'm expendable!"

No one today says Ferdinand Eberstadt, W. P. B. vice-chairman on program determination and chairman of the W. P. B. requirements committee, is either ruined or expendable.

This millionaire son of a German immigrant rides the driver's seat of the nation's $100,000,000,000 war machine. Others make policy and direct production, but he delivers the goods. Some say he, perhaps, is the most important civilian war boss of all.

Here's the story as told by men in position to know:

When Eberstadt came here, the war supply program was in a stew — some industries hoarded everything they could lay hand to, some factories idled for lack of certain supplies. Officials of all degree doled out contracts right and left, bewildered manufacturers butted their heads together diving for raw materials, while the armed services kicked for guns and ships and tanks and planes.

It was almost a year ago that this taciturn Wall Street lawyer-banker showed up as civilian boss of the army and navy munitions board. The gold braid, it's said, had a spasm.

But in short order the army and navy decided he was the best friend they both had. He figuratively knocked their noggins together, and pretty soon random supplies were organized and going where they belonged.

So, when Eberstadt began "raising hell" with the War Production Board last September for lagging behind the general war effort, harassed authorities said: "Now see here, Ferd, if you can run this thing better than we can, get over in W. P. B. and bust the bottlenecks."

So, he—

Compiled a list of every known military and civilian need for victory.

Chopped off non-essential or overlapping requisitions and allocated specific supplies to specific needs.

Gave W. P. B. a timetable on the type, quantity and purpose of goods available for military and civilian uses.

Here was something no one ever believed could be done. Eberstadt was not boasting when on December 2 he told the National Association of Manufacturers:

"No nation in all history has ever produced anything equaling it (American arms and output) and it is likely to be exceeded only by our own production in time to come."

Who is he? they asked.

The "Deacon," as they called him around his college Y. M. C. A., is a Princeton man, a Phi Beta Kappa, a wounded captain of U. S. Artillery in the last war, a former partner of the old William Gibbs McAdoo law firm in New York, a former partner of Dillon, Read & Company and now is head of his own F. Eberstadt & Company investment firm on Wall Street.

Some say he made $2,000,000 and had virtually retired on his 80-acre Long Island estate before he was 38 years old. He is 52 now, short, stocky and getting bald. He says he is going back home and sail ships with his kids again "as soon as we win this damn war."

He is very determined about it, even to the point of making personal enemies among those whom he believes to be faltering in the war effort. Sometimes he isn't very popular with those who hound him for "yes" instead of "no" answers to requests for supplies. He will turn down military petitions as readily as civilian if they exceed the supply he considers needed for more important ends.

Yes and No' Man

Eberstadt is called the biggest "yes and no" man in Washington. His office is flooded every day and Sunday from 8 a. m. to sometimes past midnight, with people who have to get his O. K., or else.

"I've listened," he says, "to lots of folks who had something to say and to lots who did not." He sits grim and silent through conferences and when everyone is talked out, he says suddenly, "here, gentlemen, is my decision." It sticks.

His best friends say Ferdinand is cold-blooded in business. That's how he got the name of "Lone Wolf" during New Deal days when he made good money in securities while others lost their shirts and fought the Securities and Exchange Commission.

He was one of Owen D. Young's "bright young men" at the reparations conference in 1929. Young wanted him because he had studied and worked in various capacities, but he was startled the second day when Eberstadt took him aside and said, "hey, this thing's a fake—it will bust up because they're playing politics and have no concern for economics." It busted.

In these days Eberstadt is a frequent companion of Bernard Baruch, that stalwart old political economist and sometimes administration dissenter who ran production almost single-handed in the last war. Many of his present ideas spring from conferences on a park bench near the White House affectionately known as "Barney's air conditioned office."

There is a general understanding around here that Baruch, Undersecretary Patterson of the War Department and Undersecretary Forrestal of the Navy maneuvered Eberstadt into favor with President Roosevelt and W. P. M. Chairman Nelson.

"I'll try it for six months," he agreed, "but I'll do the job my own way, and if anyone around here trys to interfere I'll walk out and not even say goodbye."

Friends say he always has been that way—kingpin or nothing—adding that his back talk in this instance may have resulted from early distrust of "Roosevelt reforms." On one occasion he was quoted:

"I have no use for the New Deal or any of its works and I'll have nothing to do with it."

Recently you hear that he says he has no quarrel with changing world political and social economy PROVIDED the bosses know what they are doing and get proper results.

Maybe this attitude has something to do with his success in bringing into Washington war jobs some of those who warned he would be ruined. He gets some good ones, arguing as follows:

"Like it or not, you big shots, Washington is victory's workshop and if there is a job here you can do to help win the war you'd better pitch in—

"You're expendable!"

Nation's Boxing Prospects Seen As 'Gloomy' Today

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR

New York, Dec. 26 (AP)—With more than 2,000 fisticuffers now doing their fighting for Uncle Sam, the nation's boxing prospects for the coming year were described as "gloomy" today by Ring Magazine, which named undefeated Ray Robinson as its "boxer of the year."

In announcing its copyrighted ring rankings for 1942, the magazine presented a review of the fistic year which saw "50 per cent of America's fight clubs" go out of business because of the war.

"The year was marked by a complete shut-down of boxing in 11 states," the publication declared in a copyrighted article accompanying its 18th annual rankings of the leaders in the eight weight divisions. "Competition was curtailed everywhere; in many sports it had to be abandoned. x x x and the prospect looks gloomy for 1943."

On the brighter side, the magazine pointed out that general gate increases were noted in Cleveland, Baltimore and Philadelphia over the previous year and that New York's Madison Square Garden drew 315,381 fans for 28 fight shows during 1942. The Garden shows brought a gross gate of $1,111,202, or an average of around $4,000 per show over 1941.

The list of professional and amateur fighters now in the armed forces includes 23 past world champions and four present titleholders, the magazine said.

In addition to picking the New York welterweight as its fighter of the year, the magazine announced a special award to Corporal Barney Ross of the Marines, former holder of three world titles, as "boxing's most valuable man" for his heroic fighting on Guadalcanal.

Here are the men rated by Ring as the best in their respective divisions, selected after a survey of the records of 2,100 scrappers in the United States, Canada, England, Australia and Central and South America:

Heavyweight—Joe Louis, Detroit.

Light heavyweight—Jimmy Bivins, Cleveland.

Middleweight—Tony Zale, Chicago.

Welterweight — Ray Robinson, New York.

Lightweight — Sammy Angott, Washington, Pa.

Featherweight — Willie Pep, Hartford, Conn.

Bantamweight — Manuel Ortiz, Los Angeles.

Flyweight—Peter Kane, England.

Only Louis, Zale, Pep and Ortiz are recognized as world champions by one or more of boxing's ruling bodies. Louis, Light Heavyweight Champion Gus Lesnevich, Middleweight Champion Tony Zale and Welterweight Champion Freddie Cochrane are in the armed forces.

Bivins was placed ahead of Lesnevich because he defeated him. Robinson topped the welterweights because he won all 14 of his starts during the year, nine of them by knockouts.

Although Angott has retired as lightweight champion, the magazine gave him the top spot among the 135-pounders because his retirement came late in the year.

Annual College Sports Carnival at Lake Placid

Lake Placid, N. Y., Dec. 26 (AP)—Skatse flash and pucks fly today as hockey teams from six schools launch Lake Placid's annual college week winter sports festival.

A single afternoon game and a night doubleheader set the stage for hockey and ski competition extending through January 2.

Initial participants are pucksters from Colgate, Middlebury, Cornell, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Hamilton and Williams.

Three games daily are scheduled Monday and Tuesday, with finals Tuesday night, and another college hockey tourney is set for December 31, January 1 and 2.

The annual Lake Placid Club invitation ski tournament will be conducted the latter two days, with Middlebury, unofficial winner last year, meeting slalom, downhill, cross-country and jumping entries from 10 schools.

Other competitors include New Hampshire, which scored 296.04 points to Middlebury's 296.14 before rain washed out last season's cross-country, plus Dartmouth, Colgate, Cornell, Harvard, Penn State, Princeton, Syracuse, St. Lawrence and Williams.

Monday and Tuesday also will see a field of 20 in action in the annual women's prep school and college ski tourney. Individual downhill and slalom contests are planned.

Schroeder, Betz Top Tennis Play

By DILLON GRAHAM
(AP) Features Sports Editor

New York—A talkative, two-fisted Ecuadorean, Francisco (Pancho) Segura, furnished most of the color tennis offered this year but a homebred smasher from California won the national singles championship.

Young Ted Schroeder of Glendale, Calif., whose reputation had largely been made in doubles, breezed through a singles field that had been denuded of many of its stars by military and professional calls, to whip Frankie Parker in the finals, 8-6; 7-5; 3-6; 4-6; 6-2.

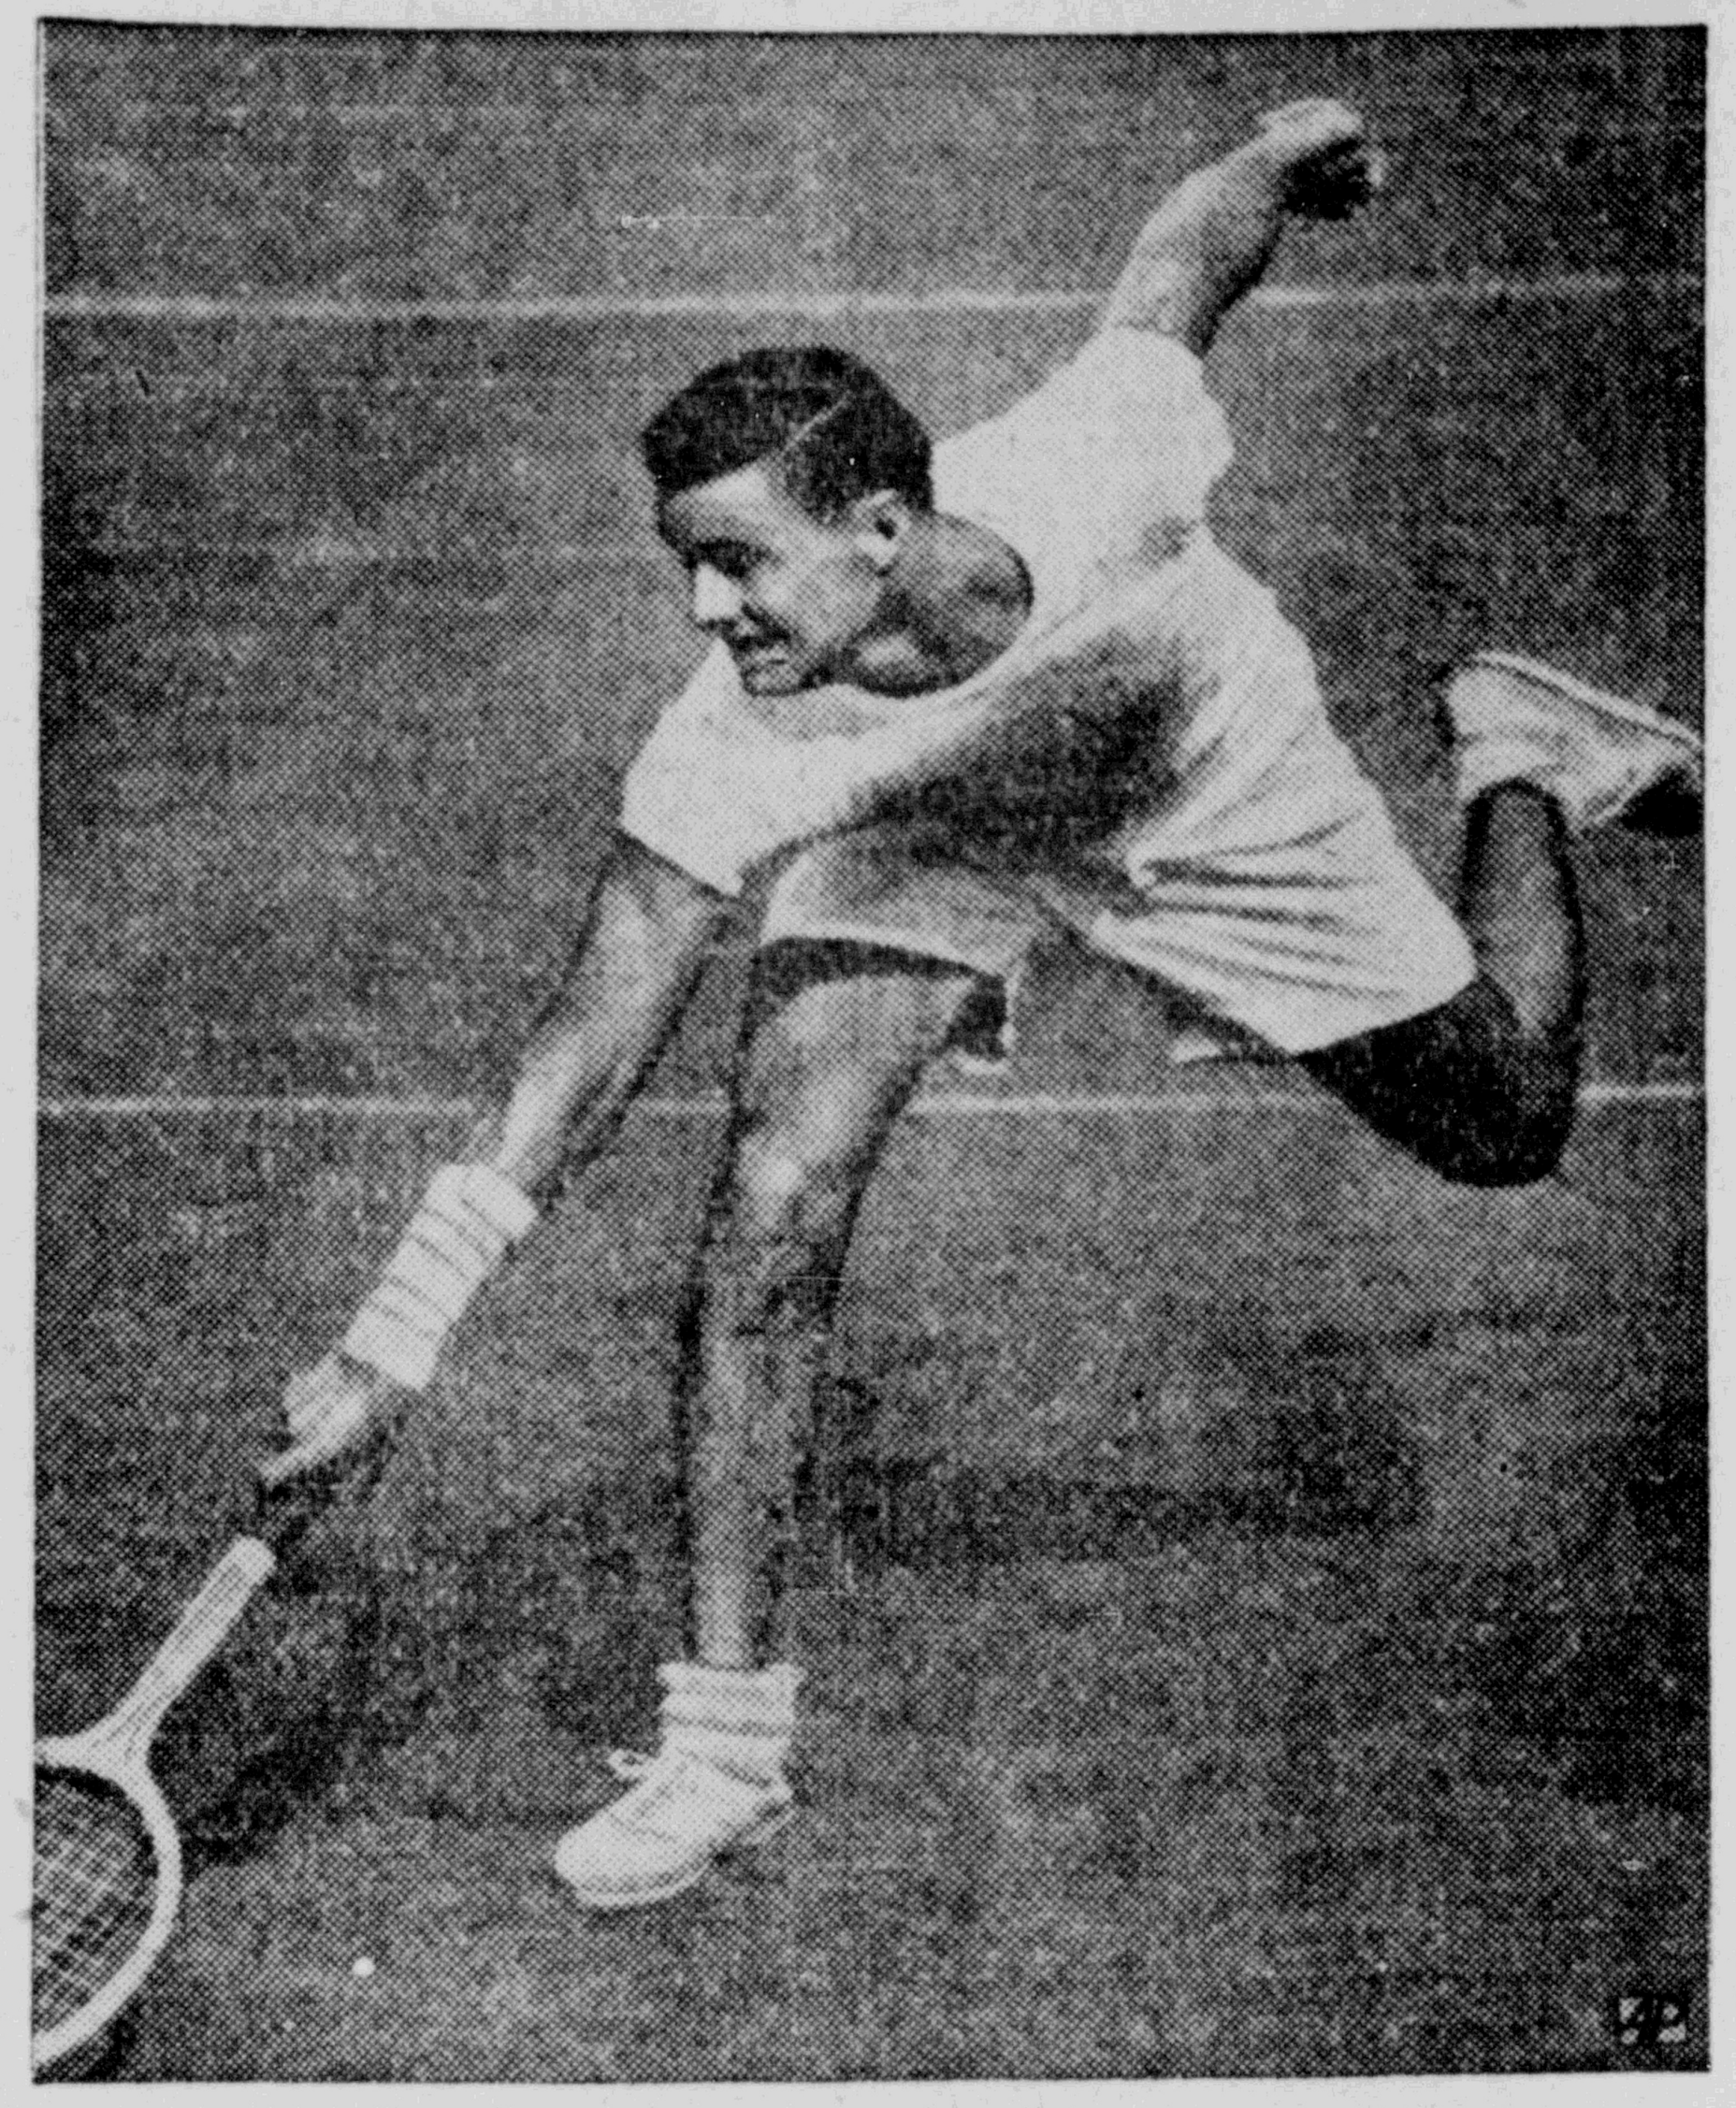
The women's championship provided a surprise as Louise Brough, husky Beverly Hills, Calif., girl, who had won almost every major tournament of the summer, lost to Pauline Betz, last year's runner-up, from Winter Park, Fla. Miss Betz, trounced by her young rival several times in other tournaments, won 4-6; 6-1; 6-4.

Segura, a dark youngster, who bounded around the court for gets like Bitsy Grant, and hit his shots with a two-handed grip reminiscent of Australia's John Bromwich, jumped to the front by winning the Florida West Coast tourney in the spring.

A shot in the arm to tennis, after the loss of such standouts as Bobby Riggs, and Frank Kovacs, Segura pulled 'em in at the gate as he won six of his ten tournaments, including the Longwood and Eastern Clay courts singles.

In the semi-finals of the nationals, however, Frankie Parker's steady baseline game drove him crazy and he lost in straight sets.

With the caliber of the field below par, this shaped up as Parker's year. The one-time Milwaukee prodigy, a challenger and ranking star for a decade, appeared too steady and experienced for the others. And he had little trouble getting the finals but Schroeder's dynamic volleying attack cut him down.



Ted Schroeder Displays Tennis Title Form

After leading 4-2 in the first set and 5-2 in the second, Parker lost both sets before Schroder's fiery offense. Parker's accurate targetry and forcing shots in the last set, Frankie could not handle the inspired game Schroeder produced.

Miss Brough and Margaret Osborne of San Francisco beat Miss Betz and Doris Hart of Miami in doubles, 2-6; 7-5; 6-0 while Lt. Gardnar Mulloy, of Miami, and Billy Talbert of Cincinnati whipped Schroeder and Sidney Wood in the men's doubles, 9-7; 7-5; 6-1.

Schroeder also won the national intercollegiate singles, beating his teammate, Larry Dee of Stanford; Seymour Greenberg, Chicago southpaw, took the national clay courts crown, and Mrs. Patricia Todd of New York won the indoor singles. Don Budge, Oakland, Calif., won the professional championship beating Bobby Riggs of Chicago, 6-2; 6-2; 6-2.

Georgia's Squad Sees Hollywood

Next Ambition Is to Beat U.C.L.A. Bruins

Pasadena, Calif., Dec. 26 (AP)—Georgia's big squad of fine football specialists had two ambitions when it came west to southern California—

(a) To beat U.C.L.A.'s Bruins in the Rose Bowl New Year's Day.

(b) To look over the movie studios.

Well, it's too early to tell whether the boys will realize their primary goal, but the secondary one they reached today when the whole squad, 40-odd strong, went out to Hollywood for luncheon at a film studio (Paramount) and later spent an hour or two looking over the lot and its quota of lovelies, and getting an idea of how movies are made.

Frankie Sinkwich, the ace of the Georgia deck, got out of bed yesterday morning and hobbled about a bit on his two injured ankles. He didn't work out, however, and Butts declared it was doubtful if Frankie would be permitted to do any heavy work prior to game time New Year's Day. Butts wants to give Frankie's most recently injured ankle, his right one, plenty of chance to heal. Wally is very happy that Sinkwich has only two ankles to get hurt.

U.C.L.A.'s Bruins sent every member of the visiting squad a Christmas present yesterday, but, as one Los Angeles sports writer put it:

Miami Track Owners Have Chills and Fevers

Miami, Fla. Dec. 26 (AP)—A week of winter horse racing and the opening of a second greyhound track in this area have not cured owners and officials of alternate chills and fever over the prospects for a happy season.

The 7,144 Christmas Day crowd at Tropical Park exceeded the 5,111 of last Monday, the opening day, and the holiday throng poured $252,376 through the pari-mutuels windows, only $6,454 less than Christmas a year ago. The track needs a $150,000 daily handle to meet its overhead, an average that has barely been met this week.

Good attendance was expected today, the first Saturday of the new season, but officials, fevered by this reasonably good showing already are developing a chill over anticipation of what might be expected next week and thereafter. Many track hands, however, are mentioning January 1 as a magical date after which everything will be rosy, but their voices are none too confident upon recalling the slump between the inaugural and Yule cards.

Dog track men have a mild case of shakes over the question of what tonight's opening of the West Flagler Kennel Club will do to the less-than-a-thousand nightly attendance at the already-operating Hollywood oval. Two other Miami area dog tracks will open soon—the Miami Beach on January 1 and the Biscayne on January 6.

The Jai Alai Fronton opened last night, rounding out the pari-mutuels setup here a bit more. The first night was successful from standpoints of crowd and betting.

Johnny Adams, leading jockey of the year, boosted his wins to a total of 241 yesterday by scoring a triple, among them the mile and 70 yard Christmas handicap astride Minee-No. He equalled the track record of a minute, 41 and 1/5 seconds and paid $5.70 for two. Adams other victories were in the first and third races.

He is 19 wins ahead of Eric Guerin, a lead the runner-up has no mathematical chance of overcoming.

Anderson Pleased With His All-Stars

Philadelphia, Dec. 26 (AP) — Heartley "Hunk" Anderson was a completely satisfied individual today, as his National League All-Stars went into their last day of drills before their clash with the Washington Redskins in tomorrow's pro bowl classic at Shibe Park.

If morale could do it, his team was a cinch to walk off the field with victory—and in his case, revenge, Anderson was convinced. He and his assistant, Luke Johnsos, had completed a terrific task of drilling a mixed group of players in two systems of football in one short week, and the results, they said, were all they could ask for.

Ray Flaherty, coach of the Redskins, continued to worry about lack of enthusiasm on his squad. The champions went through a light drill yesterday, confining their practice to touch football.

Wee Willie Wilkin, the Redskins all-league tackle, reported for duty yesterday. He had been called home to California after the title game two weeks ago.

The All-Stars lost another player yesterday when Dr. W. W. Kelly, physician to Don Hutson, ordered the Green Bay kicking and pass-grabbing star to stay out of the game. The doctor said Hutson, injured November 22 in a game against the New York Giants, had a cold, severe cough and chest injury.

Milt Simington, Pittsburgh Steelers guard who was on the All-Stars first string line, suffered a heart attack Thursday and announced he would quit football for good.

Bowling Party at Emerick's Dec. 29

Funds Will Go Toward 'Buy a Bomber Fund'

Jack Martin, proprietor of Emerick's Recreation Alleys, has announced a gala holiday party which will be held at his establishment on Albany avenue Tuesday evening, December 29.

This novel affair promises to be one of the highlights in bowling this season. The bowlers which are expected to number over 100 men and women both professional and amateur will contribute to the "Buy a Bomber Fund."

Following the bowling, which will start at 8 o'clock, Mr. Martin will play host to the bowlers and all others present at a Yuletide party. An entertaining evening for everyone is assured and host Martin has issued a welcome to the bowling public of Kingston and vicinity to be his guests.

Fifth Annual Renewal Of Blue-Gray Classic

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 26 (AP)—Forty-four gridiron huskies, hailed as the pick of collegiate talent from opposite sides of the Mason-Dixon line, stood poised here today to do battle in the fifth annual renewal of the Blue-Gray classic.

Football fans in this section hopefully describe the game as the greatest battle since Appomattox, and appropriately enough, the teams were set to square-off here in the "cradle of the Confederacy."

Dedicated to the present solidarity of the nation the game was inaugurated five years ago and has gained in scope and popularity each year.

Both squads have undergone intensive training at the hands of picked coaches from their respective sections. Each team has won two games, making today's struggle the rubber game of the series.

Advance notices of line-ups were given out, but with such able performers on hand, any one of a number of conditions might bring a last minute change. All players are seniors.

Bill Vickroy of Ohio State, and Joe Muma of Virginia Military Institute, will meet in the center of the field as rival captains to decide the final pre-game arrangements.

Probable Line-ups:

Ted Schroeder Will Defend Tennis Title

New Orleans, Dec. 26 (AP)—Ted Schroeder, the nation's top ranking tennis player, defends his Sugar Bowl tennis title here today in the opening round of the annual week of midwinter sports.

The carnival of sports which leads up to the New Year's Day football climax between Tulsa and Tennessee usually is staged for thousands of visitors to New Orleans, but this transportation-taxed year service men and hometowners will form the bulk of the group.

Other sports on tap are a rowing race today between two service teams from the Eighth Naval District; an amateur boxing card Monday between New Orleans and Chicago teams; Stanford vs. Great Lakes Naval Training Station on the basketball court Wednesday and an invitational track meet Thursday. Only the sailing regatta is a war casualty.

Schroeder was seeded on top of the tennis tournament with Francisco Secura, the little native of Ecuador, right behind. Schroeder faced James Ebert of Illinois today while Segura tied up with Glen Gardner of New Orleans.

Third seeded William Talbert of Cincinnati met the promising youngster Jack Tuero of Memphis and fourth seeded Jack Kramer of California took on Tulane's Roy Bartlett.

Schroeder teamed up with his old champion, Kramer, in the doubles for the No. 1 seeding there for the three days play.

Together they won the national title two years in a row before Kramer quit competition for a couple of seasons.

Two Persons Are Injured When Taxicabs Collide

Two persons were injured at 3:15 o'clock this mornig when two taxicabs collided at the intesection of Foxhall and Hasbrouck avenues. According to the taxi drivers in their report to the police, the accident was due to the slippery condition of the intersection.

The two people injured, both passengers in the taxis, were: John Remus and Marjorie Dittus, both of 38 Shufeldt street. Their injuries were said to be not serious.

The taxicabs were operated by Robert Harvey of Bloomington and Irving H. Wilcox of Route 1, Kingston. Both cars were damaged.

Eberstadt Knows How to Deliver

'Bottleneck Buster' Gives Decisions on All War Supply Requests

By FRANK I. WELLER

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—When "bottleneck buster" Eberstadt took a Washington war job, his anti-Roosevelt pals said, "Ferd, you're ruined."

"Okay, Okay," he snorted, "I'm expendable!"

No one today says Ferdinand Eberstadt, W. P. B. vice-chairman on program determination and chairman of the W. P. B. requirements committee, is either ruined or expendable.

This millionaire son of a German immigrant rides the driver's seat of the nation's $100,000,000,000 war machine. Others make policy and direct production, but he delivers the goods. Some say he, perhaps, is the most important civilian war boss of all.

Here's the story as told by men in position to know:

When Eberstadt came here, the war supply program was in a stew — some industries hoarded everything they could lay hand to, some factories idled for lack of certain supplies. Officials of all degree doled out contracts right and left, bewildered manufacturers butted their heads together diving for raw materials, while the armed services kicked for guns and ships and tanks and planes.

It was almost a year ago that this taciturn Wall Street lawyer-banker showed up as civilian boss of the army and navy munitions board. The gold braid, it's said, had a spasm.

But in short order the army and navy decided he was the best friend they both had. He figuratively knocked their noggins together, and pretty soon random supplies were organized and going where they belonged.

So, when Eberstadt began "raising hell" with the War Production Board last September for lagging behind the general war effort, harassed authorities said: "Now see here, Ferd, if you can run this thing better than we can, get over in W. P. B. and bust the bottlenecks."

So, he——

Compiled a list of every known military and civilian need for victory.

Organized exact, minute-to-minute reports on the supply of vital materials.

Chopped off non-essential or overlapping requisitions and allocated specific supplies to specific needs.

Gave W. P. B. a timetable on the type, quantity and purpose of goods available for military and civilian uses.

Here was something no one ever believed could be done. Eberstadt was not boasting when on December 2 he told the National Association of Manufacturers:

"No nation in all history has ever produced anything equaling it (American arms and output) and it is likely to be exceeded only by our own production in time to come."

Who is he? they asked.

The "Deacon," as they called him around his college Y .M. C. A., is a Princeton man, a Phi Beta Kappa, a wounded captain of U. S. Artillery in the last war, a former partner of the old William Gibbs McAdoo law firm in New York, a former partner of Dillon, Read & Company and now is head of his own F. Eberstadt & Company investment firm on Wall Street.

Some say he made $2,000,000 and had virtually retired on his 80-acre Long Island estate before he was 38 years old. He is 52 now, short, stocky and getting bald. He says he is going back home and sail ships with his kids again "as soon as we win this damn war."

He is very determined about it, even to the point of making personal enemies among those whom he believes to be faltering in the war effort. Sometimes he isn't very popular with those who hound him for "yes" instead of "no" answers to requests for supplies. He will turn down military petitions as readily as civilian if they exceed the supply he considers needed for more important ends.

'Yes and No' Man

Eberstadt is called the biggest "yes and no" man in Washington. His office is flooded every day and Sunday from 8 a. m. to sometimes past midnight, with people who have to get his O. K., or else.

"I've listened," he says, "to lots of folks who had something to say and to lots who did not." He sits grim and silent through conferences and when everyone is talked out, he says suddenly, "here, gentlemen, is my decision." It sticks.

His best friends say Ferdinand is cold-blooded in business. That's how he got the name of "Lone Wolf" during New Deal days when he made good money in securities while others lost their shirts and fought the Securities and Exchange Commission.

He was one of Owen D. Young's "bright young men" at the reparations conference in 1929. Young wanted him because he had studied and worked in various capacities, but he was startled the second day when Eberstadt took him aside and said, "hey, this thing's a fake—it will bust up because they're playing politics and have no concern for economics." It busted.

In these days Eberstadt is a frequent companion of Bernard Baruch, that stalwart old political economist and sometimes administration dissenter who ran production almost single-handed in the last war. Many of his present ideas spring from conferences on a park bench near the White House affectionately known as "Barney's air conditioned office."

There is a general understanding around here that Baruch, Undersecretary Patterson of the War Department and Undersecretary Forrestal of the Navy maneuvered Eberstadt into favor with President Roosevelt and W. P. M. Chairman Nelson.

"I'll try it for six months," he agreed, "but I'll do the job my own way, and if anyone around here trys to interfere I'll walk out and not even say goodbye."

Friends say he always has been that way—kingpin or nothing—adding that his back talk in this instance may have resulted from early distrust of "Roosevelt reforms." On one occasion he was quoted:

"I have no use for the New Deal or any of its works and I'll have nothing to do with it."

Recently you hear that he says he has no quarrel with changing world political and social economy PROVIDED the bosses know what they are doing and get proper results.

Maybe this attitude has something to do with his success in bringing into Washington war jobs some of those who warned he would be ruined. He gets some good ones, arguing as follows:

"Like it or not, you big shots, Washington is victory's workshop and if there is a job here you can do to help win the war you'd better pitch in—

"You're expendable!"

Civilians Must Be Their Own Censors

OFFICE OF CENSORSHIP DECEMBER 26. 1942

On battle fronts every day men risk their lives to discover the location and strength of the military units of the enemy. Yet at home, too many of us are presenting the enemy with information of the same military value, the Office of Censorship says in a statement.

This is the information which newspapers and individuals are asked not to tell the enemy:

Do not tell the troop units in which soldiers serve overseas.

There is no objection to revealing that Pvt. John Jones is in Australia or that Seaman Tom Brown saw action in the Atlantic, but there is military information which endangers the lives of American fighting men in stating that Pvt. John Jones, "Company C, 600th Infantry," is in Australia, or Seaman Tom Brown, "Abroad the U. S.S. Wisconsin," is in the Atlantic.

The Office of Censorship says: "We ask editors not to publish these troop identifications, and we ask parents and relatives not to reveal them. Don't give the enemy anything that may lengthen the war!"

The Freeman takes pride in the fact that its policy of self-censorship always has been to delete vital information from all news items concerning ships or army units in foreign regions. Parents, relatives or friends of men in service need tell The Freeman nothing beyond the privileged news as outlined above.

Darlan Assassin Is Executed by Squad in Algiers

The consequences of this violent removal of Darlan, whose assumption of African colonial leadership brought bitter protests from divided French factions and other quarters, still were unclear. It appeared, however, that the way now was open for greater unity among the French fighting beside the allies.

Gen. Jean Marie Bergeret, close associate of the dead admiral, urged all Frenchmen to unite "for the only fight that counts—the liberation of France."

French justice moved almost instantly to punish the assassin. At 6 p. m. yesterday, 27 hours after Darlan's death, the court martial sentenced him to death. The young killer, when at first he believed his attempt had failed, said: "I am sorry I missed my mission." Then, when informed Darlan was dead, he said, "so much the better, you may kill me now."

Letters Are Seized

A communique said letters between the young man and his mother, now living in Italy, had been seized but "the contents threw no light on the case or the actual circumstances of the crime."

The assassin used the name "Morand" when he went to the summer palace to ambush Darlan at 3 p. m. on Christmas Eve. He was said to have spent most of his life in Paris and Italy, and to have entered the University of Algiers about a year ago.

The body of the dapper little French admiral and politician was taken to the Algiers Cathedral for services today, with a Mass to be said later in Rabat, French Morocco. A huge throng, showing little emotion, passed the bier yesterday at the governor general's palace.

The imperial council's meeting was scheduled for today, and Giraud—who only last week expressed a wish to avoid politics and remain in a strictly fighting role—was being mentioned as likely to take Darlan's place.

Other council members rushed back to Algiers, along with Lieut. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, who was making a Christmas visit to the Tunisian front lines, for the conference.

Others mentioned with Giraud as possible successors are General Bergeret, former aviation secretary in the Vichy French cabinet; Gen. Auguste Nogues, governor of French Morocco; Pierre Boison, governor General of French West Africa, who turned over that territory and Dakar to the allies bloodlessly at Darlan's behest, and Yves Chatel, governor of Algeria.

The assassin shot Darlan once in the mouth and again in the lung, and the admiral died en route to a hospital.

The killer wounded Commandant Hourcade, the admiral's aide, in the leg, and surrendered to another aide, Adjutant Andre Vuichard, who smashed a punch to his jaw.

He told Vuichard: "I surrender; my gun is empty."

Local Driver Is Arrested Following Collision

Charles R. Skane, 58, of 140 Wall street, was arrested at 3:15 o'clock this morning at the Washington avenue viaduct, charged with driving an automobile while intoxicated. The arrest was made by Officers Welch and Kinch.

Later in police court Skane pleaded guilty to the charge and Judge Matthew V. Cahill imposed a fine of $50 and revoked Skane's operator's license.

Skane's arrest followed a crash between his automobile and the auto of Paul Burton of Sawkill at the Washington avenue viaduct. No personal injuries were reported, but both cars were damaged.

Seasonal Gains In Retail Stores During November

Albany, Dec. 24—Retail stores in the state reported seasonal gains of 4.6 per cent in employment and 3.3 per cent in payrolls from the middle of October to the middle of November. According to a statement issued today by Industrial Commissioner Frieda S. Miller, the gain in employment was somewhat larger than any reported in the same period of the last eight years. The increase in total payrolls was almost as large as any reported in a like period. The gains this November followed larger than usual seasonal increases in October. This year the Christmas buying season began earlier than it has in many years and this accounted for some of the increases. In those sections of the state where a great amount of war production is under way, record-size forces were employed in many of the variety, 5 and 10 cent stores, and department stores. The gains in these stores offset part of the losses in those lines of trade affected by freezing orders, government restrictions, etc. As a group, retail stores employed 1.6 per cent smaller forces this November than in November of last year, but they paid out 0.4 per cent more in total amount of payroll. Those figures are based on reports from 8,538 retail stores in all parts of the state.

Wholesale firms in the state reported a slight gain of 0.3 per cent in employment and a further increase of 1.5 per cent in wages, salaries and commissions from October to November. A small gain or loss in employment usually occurs during this period. The payroll gain was about twice as large as any reported in the same period of the last eight years. Most of it was due to higher commissions earned by salesmen. Compared with last November, these firms employed 9.4 per cent smaller forces during this November and they paid out 0.4 per cent less in total wages, salaries and commissions. Reports from 2,695 wholesale dealers throughout the state form the basis for these figures. Reports from both wholesalers and retail firms are collected, tabulated and analyzed in the Division of Statistics and Information, under the direction of Dr. E. B. Patton.

Man Is Arrested for Using Hammer to Knock at Door

Using a hammer to force an entrance to the house of Mrs. Anthony Mowers at 61 Cornell street at 2:20 o'clock Christmas morning resulted in the arrest of John A. Abbott, 59, a negro barber of 255 East Strand. The arrest was made by Officers Welch and Kinch who had been sent to the house in response to a telephone call.

This morning when Abbott was arraigned in police court before Judge Matthew V. Cahill he entered a plea of guilty to a charge of disorderly conduct and was sentenced to 30 days in jail and fined $25. The serving of the jail sentence was suspended. Abbott paid the fine.

According to the information lodged against Abbott he had called at the Cornell street house and used a hammer to knock against the side of the house and on the front door.

Ruth Bryan Rohde Seeks A Union of All Nations

By ADELAIDE KERR

Ruth Bryan Rohde has just launched a plan for a union of nations after the war, which she believes could build and keep world peace.

The daughter of the Great Commoner, William Jennings Bryan, has had a good deal of experience in international affairs, first as congresswoman from Florida (1929-33) and later as our first woman envoy to a foreign country —Denmark (1933-36).

She has outlined her plan for a union of nations in book form. As far as I know she is the first woman to block out an actual world peace plan on such a scale. So she is my nomination for the Woman of the Month.

Mrs. Rohde based her plan for world union on the same kind of democratic system which she found at home.

"The founding fathers had 13 states," she said in describing it to me. "They were as full of suspicion and lack of understanding as the nations are today. But they were welded into one peaceful unit. If we say the democratic system is good and we believe in it, then why not use it?

"To begin with, there would have to be an agreement between nations — something they could subscribe to like the constitution, including a definite bill of rights, that sets a line beyond which no country can go."

Then Mrs. Rohde went on to outline the framework on which the union could function.

"First there would have to be an executive head, elected by all the nations. Sometimes he would come from one country, sometimes from another. Under him there would be international departments of commerce, economics, etc., to handle the basic commodities which have often provoked wars.

"Second, a legislative body of two houses. If there were 60 nations in the union there could be a senate of 120 (two from each nation) and a lower house proportioned on some ratio of population.

RUTH BRYAN ROHDE

"Third, there would be an international court whose authority would be similar to that of our Supreme Court and whose membership would be drawn from all the nations in the union. It could judge disputes between nations.

"And, finally, there would be an international police force. Each nation could contribute something to it—troops, equipment, land or food. Suppose trouble boils up between France and Germany. As things are now it's nobody's concern but France's and Germany's. But if the world union were in effect, the aggressor would be driven back by the international police force and the government in power in that aggressor country penalized—say by discharge and exile."

Mrs. Rohde has assembled her plan under the title "Look Forward, Warrior," because "there are no civilians today—all are subject to attack."

Axis Retreats On Three Fronts

three-day push southeast of Nalchik, in the Caucasus, killing 2,000 Axis troops since December 22.

Beat off tank-led German counter-attacks in the Velikie Luki sector, 90 miles from the Latvian frontier, and heavily blasted Nazi dugouts and blockhouses west of Rzhev.

Captured or destroyed at least 822 Axis tanks and seized huge stores of booty.

On the middle Don Steppes, where Col.-Gen. Nikolai F. Vatutin's armies are driving toward Rostov in a thrust to cut off the whole great mass of Germans fighting in southern Russia, the Soviet command reported 15,860 Nazis were killed or captured in the past 24 hours.

Soviet dispatches pictured Gen. Vatutin's troops as steadily closing in around Millerovo, key rail hub 120 miles north of Rostov.

One column had reached Grekove, just 10 miles west of Millerovo, and another column recaptured Malchevskaya, 10 miles north of the rail city.

Three Nazi Problems

To save his armies in the tightening pincers at Stalingrad.

To prevent Nazi forces in the Rzhev district, 130 miles northwest of Moscow, from being completely surrounded.

about those proportions from food available for civilians in 1942. Some of the lend-lease food was made available to our soldiers stationed abroad.

There are shortages of other foods in this country but other factors than shipments to our allies and purchases for the armed services figure in them.

Lend-lease shipments have gone principally to Russia and Great Britain, including shipments to Malta, the British forces in North Africa and garrisons at other points around the world. Food has or soon will be sent to North Africa for the civilian population.

In the first World War, 65 per cent of food shipments were grain and grain products. Today, we have a surplus of wheat but the shipping situation calls for less bulky, highly nutritive foods.

From April, 1941, through last September shipments were divided as follows: Dairy products, 16 per cent; pork products, 24 per cent; grains, 20 per cent. The remaining 40 per cent included eggs, fruits, vegetables, fats, oils, lard (not included in pork products) canned fish and vitamin concentrates.

Civilians Must Be Their Own Censors

OFFICE OF CENSORSHIP
DECEMBER 26. 1942

On battle fronts every day men risk their lives to discover the location and strength of the military units of the enemy. Yet at home, too many of us are presenting the enemy with information of the same military value, the Office of Censorship says in a statement.

This is the information which newspapers and individuals are asked not to tell the enemy:

Do not tell the names of ships upon which sailors serve.

Do not tell the troop units in which soldiers serve overseas.

There is no objection to revealing that Pvt. John Jones is in Australia or that Seaman Tom Brown saw action in the Atlantic, but there is military information which endangers the lives of American fighting men in stating that Pvt. John Jones, "Company C, 600th Infantry," is in Australia, or Seaman Tom Brown, "Abroad the U. S.S. Wisconsin," is in the Atlantic.

The Office of Censorship says: "We ask editors not to publish these troop identifications, and we ask parents and relatives not to reveal them. Don't give the enemy anything that may lengthen the war!"

The Freeman takes pride in the fact that its policy of self-censorship always has been to delete vital information from all news items concerning ships or army units in foreign regions. Parents, relatives or friends of men in service need tell The Freeman nothing beyond the privileged news as outlined above.

leadership in the colonial empire.

The consequences of this violent removal of Darlan, whose assumption of African colonial leadership brought bitter protests from divided French factions and other quarters, still were unclear. It appeared, however, that the way now was open for greater unity among the French fighting beside the allies.

Gen. Jean Marie Bergeret, close associate of the dead admiral, urged all Frenchmen to unite "for the only fight that counts—the liberation of France."

French justice moved almost instantly to punish the assassin. At 6 p. m. yesterday, 27 hours after Darlan's death, the court martial sentenced him to death. The young killer, when at first he believed his attempt had failed, said: "I am sorry I missed my mission." Then, when informed Darlan was dead, he said, "so much the better, you may kill me now."

Letters Are Seized

A communique said letters between the young man and his mother, now living in Italy, had been seized but "the contents threw no light on the case or the actual circumstances of the crime."

The assassin used the name "Morand" when he went to the summer palace to ambush Darlan at 3 p. m. on Christmas Eve. He was said to have spent most of his life in Paris and Italy, and to have entered the University of Algiers about a year ago.

The body of the dapper little French admiral and politician was taken to the Algiers Cathedral for services today, with a Mass to be said later in Rabat, French Morocco. A huge throng, showing little emotion, passed the bier yesterday at the governor general's palace.

The imperial council's meeting was scheduled for today, and Giraud—who only last week expressed a wish to avoid politics and remain in a strictly fighting role—was being mentioned as likely to take Darlan's place.

Other council members rushed back to Algiers, along with Lieut. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, who was making a Christmas visit to the Tunisian front lines, for the conference.

Others mentioned with Giraud as possible successors are General Bergeret, former aviation secretary in the Vichy French cabinet; Gen. Auguste Nogues, governor of French Morocco; Pierre Boison, governor General of French West Africa, who turned over that territory and Dakar to the allies bloodlessly at Darlan's behest, and Yves Chatel, governor of Algeria.

The assassin shot Darlan once in the mouth and again in the lung, and the admiral died en route to a hospital.

The killer wounded Commandant Hourcade, the admiral's aide, in the leg, and surrendered to another aide, Adjutant Andre Vuichard, who smashed a punch to his jaw.

He told Vuichard: "I surrender; my gun is empty."

Skane's arrest followed a crash between his automobile and the auto of Paul Burton of Sawkill at the Washington avenue viaduct. No personal injuries were reported, but both cars were damaged.

Seasonal Gains In Retail Stores During November

Albany, Dec. 24—Retail stores in the state reported seasonal gains of 4.6 per cent in employment and 3.3 per cent in payrolls from the middle of October to the middle of November. According to a statement issued today by Industrial Commissioner Frieda S. Miller, the gain in employment was somewhat larger than any reported in the same period of the last eight years. The increase in total payrolls was almost as large as any reported in a like period. The gains this November followed larger than usual seasonal increases in October. This year the Christmas buying season began earlier than it has in many years and this accounted for some of the increases. In those sections of the state where a great amount of war production is under way, record-size forces were employed in many of the variety, 5 and 10 cent stores, and department stores. The gains in these stores offset part of the losses in those lines of trade affected by freezing orders, government restrictions, etc. As a group, retail stores employed 1.6 per cent smaller forces this November than in November of last year, but they paid out 0.4 per cent more in total amount of payroll. Those figures are based on reports from 8,538 retail stores in all parts of the state.

Wholesale firms in the state reported a slight gain of 0.3 per cent in employment and a further increase of 1.5 per cent in wages, salaries and commissions from October to November. A small gain or loss in employment usually occurs during this period. The payroll gain was about twice as large as any reported in the same period of the last eight years. Most of it was due to higher commissions earned by salesmen. Compared with last November, these firms employed 9.4 per cent smaller forces during this November and they paid out 0.4 per cent less in total wages, salaries and commissions. Reports from 2,695 wholesale dealers throughout the state form the basis for these figures. Reports from both wholesalers and retail firms are collected, tabulated and analyzed in the Division of Statistics and Information, under the direction of Dr. E. B. Patton.

Ruth Bryan Rohde Seeks A Union of All Nations

By ADELAIDE KERR

RUTH BRYAN ROHDE

Ruth Bryan Rohde has just launched a plan for a union of nations after the war, which she believes could build and keep world peace.

The daughter of the Great Commoner, William Jennings Bryan, has had a good deal of experience in international affairs, first as congresswoman from Florida (1929-33) and later as our first woman envoy to a foreign country—Denmark (1933-36).

She has outlined her plan for a union of nations in book form. As far as I know she is the first woman to block out an actual world peace plan on such a scale. So she is my nomination for the Woman of the Month.

Mrs. Rohde based her plan for world union on the same kind of democratic system which she found at home.

"The founding fathers had 13 states," she said in describing it to me. "They were as full of suspicion and lack of understanding as the nations are today. But they were welded into one peaceful unit. If we say the democratic system is good and we believe in it, then why not use it?

"To begin with, there would have to be an agreement between nations — something they could subscribe to like the constitution, including a definite bill of rights, that sets a line beyond which no country can go."

Then Mrs. Rohde went on to outline the framework on which the union could function.

"First there would have to be an executive head, elected by all the nations. Sometimes he would come from one country, sometimes from another. Under him there would be international departments of commerce, economics, etc., to handle the basic commodities which have often provoked wars.

"Second, a legislative body of two houses. If there were 60 nations in the union there could be a senate of 120 (two from each nation) and a lower house proportioned on some ratio of population.

"Third, there would be an international court whose authority would be similar to that of our Supreme Court and whose membership would be drawn from all the nations in the union. It could judge disputes between nations.

"And, finally, there would be an international police force. Each nation could contribute something to it—troops, equipment, land or food. Suppose trouble boils up between France and Germany. As things are now it's nobody's concern but France's and Germany's. But if the world union were in effect, the aggressor would be driven back by the international police force and the government in power in that aggressor country penalized—say by discharge and exile."

Mrs. Rohde has assembled her plan under the title "Look Forward, Warrior," because "there are no civilians today—all are subject to attack."

Axis Retreats On Three Fronts

three-day push southeast of Nalchik, in the Caucasus, killing 2,000 Axis troops since December 22.

Beat off tank-led German counter-attacks in the Velikie Luki sector, 90 miles from the Latvian frontier, and heavily blasted Nazi dugouts and blockhouses west of Rzhev.

Captured or destroyed at least 822 Axis tanks and seized huge stores of booty.

On the middle Don Steppes, where Col.-Gen. Nikolai F. Vatutin's armies are driving toward Rostov in a thrust to cut off the whole great mass of Germans fighting in southern Russia, the Soviet command reported 15,860 Nazis were killed or captured in the past 24 hours.

Soviet dispatches pictured Gen. Vatutin's troops as steadily closing in around Millerovo, key rail hub 120 miles north of Rostov.

Three Nazi Problems

Maj.-Gen. Nikolai Zhuravlev, Soviet military expert, declared in Moscow that Hitler was now confronted with three desperate problems:

To save his armies in the tightening pincers at Stalingrad.

To prevent Nazi forces in the Rzhev district, 130 miles northwest of Moscow, from being completely surrounded.

To halt the Russian offensive sweeping toward Latvia in the Velikie Luki zone.
